Blake in the Marketplace, 1997

BY ROBERT N. ESSICK

Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost.
John 6:12

1997 may have fallen just short of being an annus mirabilis for the Blake marketplace, but it can fairly lay claim to being an annus revelatio. The first month brought forth the first discovery: a previously-unrecorded impression, in a previously-unknown early state, of one of Blake's original separate plates, "Lucifer and the Pope in Hell." Further, this newly-discovered impression (see illus. 10 and compare to illus. 11 and 12) is a "touched" proof—that is, it bears pencil additions by Blake indicating further work to be considered for execution on the copperplate. As far as I can determine, this is the only extant touched proof of any of Blake's separate plates. Such proofs help us understand Blake's working methods and give us a brief glimpse of the printmaker thinking with his hands and eyes as he sketches with a pencil over a trial impression in an early state. Along with "Albion rose" and "The Accusers of Theft Adultery Murder," "Lucifer and the Pope in Hell" is one of Blake's rarest separate plates. All three are products of the first half of the 1790s and express Blake's radical political views of that period. Any comprehensive account of these views must consider their pictorial, and not just their textual, expression.

Patrick Noon, formerly the Curator of Drawings and Prints at the Yale Center for British Art, recognized some time ago that an unattributed drawing in the Center's collection was a work by Blake. This discovery was not announced until the publication of Noon's catalogue for the Blake exhibition at the Center, 2 April through 6 July 1997, See illus. 8 and its caption for the drawing and information about it.

John Windle, the San Francisco book dealer who specializes in Blake and his circle, was as usual in London in June to exhibit at one, and attend all, of the annual book fairs. He also paid a visit to Christie's, where he found a rather ordinary copy of the Job engravings. Tucked within this volume was something extraordinary—a copy of plates 25-27 of Blake's The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, accompanied by a handwritten note by the collector Frank Rinder. A brief glance at Bentley's Blake Books proved to Windle that he had rediscovered copy M of The Marriage, untraced since its sale at the great Linnell auction of 1918. Christie's offered copy M for sale on 26 November. Bidding was surprisingly muted and Windle, acting for the Bentley collection of Toronto, had to battle only against the reserve (the price below which the auction house will not sell a specific lot). Thus, with a bid of just £9,000 (£10,350 with the buyer's premium), Windle acquired the prize. See illus. 4 and its caption for details about copy M.

One further plate from an illuminated book changed hands in 1997. Europe plate 1, sometimes titled "The Ancient of Days" or "God Creating the Universe," is probably Blake's best-known design and arguably among the most famous images in the English-speaking world. The impression formerly owned by the artist and printer Leonard Baskin has now migrated into my collection (illus. 1). It is the first original print of "The Ancient of Days" to appear on the market since 1970, when Paul Mellon purchased the version in brown ink, now in the Yale Center for British Art, from the New Haven book dealer C. A. Stonehill. For reproductions and some new information (or at least speculations) about "The Ancient of Days," see illus. 1-3 and their captions.

Early in August, a woman of some years walked into the London, Bond Street, shop of Marlborough Rare Books. She carried a shopping bag containing three volumes: a late nineteenth-century edition of The Pilgrim's Progress; an album of magazine and newspaper clippings about Shakespeare, mostly dating from the 1920s; and George Cumberland's copy of Blake's 1809 Descriptive Catalogue, last recorded by Cumberland in his journal in November 1809 and the only traced example remaining in private hands. These books had been acquired by the woman's late father many years ago. I have no information about the destiny of the first two works; after some complex but friendly negotiations, with Michael Brand of Marlborough and John Windle acting as intermediaries, the Descriptive Catalogue made its way into my collection. The printed text is richly supplemented, with unique annotations by Blake, a flyleaf note by Cumberland ("They say Blake was mad: If so Shakespeare & Milton were so too,..."), and two letters by John Linnell. See the entry below under "First Editions of Blake's Writings" and illus. 5-7 and their captions for more information on this slender but intriguing pamphlet.

The Tate Gallery has long been the possessor and exhibitor of 10 of Blake's 12 large color prints, designed and first executed in 1795. The missing designs were Naomi Entreaty Ruth and Orpah (impressions are in the Fitzwilliam Museum and the Victoria and Albert Museum) and Satan Exulting over Eve (Getty Museum and collection of the artist John Craxton). The Craxton impression of Satan Exulting was acquired by the Tate early in 1997. This purchase, assisted by several charitable institutions and private individuals, was made as a most fitting tribute to Martin Butlin, from the gallery's conservation department hopes to improve the print's appearance by the time you are reading this.

The first Blake drawing to appear at auction in 1997 did exceedingly well. His light and sketchy (a dealer would say "delicate and sensitive") preliminary drawing of the Last Judgment (Butlin #643) was offered by Christie's London on 8 April with an estimate of £4000-6000. Even though the full-page illustration in the auction catalogue rendered the image almost invisible, spirited bidding by agents acting for two collectors drove the winning bid to £10,500. With the addition of auction-house fees, agents fees, value-added tax on the former, and a strong pound, the final cost approached £20,000. This I believe is a record price for one of Blake's documentary drawings with little visual impact. Perhaps the subject alone, so important to Blake, stimulated the market. I have not yet been able to discover the identity of the new owner. My best guess—and it is no more than that—is that the successful bidder was the same British private collector who acquired Blake's illustrations to Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress in 1996.

On 13 November, Sotheby's London offered, in one lot and in one frame, two of Blake's preliminary drawings for his 1821 Virgil wood engravings (illus. 9). Although not a completely unanticipated discovery like the early state of "Lucifer and the Pope in Hell," these wash drawings must surely count as an important rediscovery. They were last recorded in the now legendary 1939 Blake exhibition at the Philadelphia Museum of Art, the catalogue of which names "Dr. Frederick T. Murphy" as their owner. Sotheby's estimate of £8000-12,000 for the pair was ludicrously low, particularly since the New York branch of the same firm sold a single Virgil drawing for £79,750 in 1992 (Butlin #769.19, now in the collection of Maurice Sendak). The print-dealer Nicholas Lott (formerly of Connecticut, now of Bath, England) was a witness to the drama and reports that the bidding was "a real battle," with considerable telephone activity, contestants jumping in and out of the fray, and a suspense-generating pace with increments of only £1000. The drawings were finally knocked down to Lott, acting for me, at £64,000 (£71,900 with the buyer's premium added). Over the last 15 years, several of the Virgil drawings have changed ownership; for a complete accounting of their present whereabouts and other information on the Virgil designs, see Appendix 2, below.

The Virgil drawings were sold in the morning of the 13th; in the afternoon, Sotheby's offered a large (739 lots) collection of late eighteenth-century British etchings, engravings, and mezzotints in many genres, from historical to landscape to caricature. All had been in the same family since their original purchase at or near the time of publication. The group included a stunning collection of separate prints after Fuseli (11 prints in seven lots), with three printed in colors. The sale also placed on offer a rare copy engraving by Blake ("Venus Dissuades Adonis from Hunting" after Richard Cosway) and prints after John Hamilton Mortimer and James Barry (prints by both artists gathered into just one lot each). All lots bore surprisingly high estimates; all are recorded below under the name of their designers. A selection of significant works by Blake's circle and followers are reproduced here as illus. 13-17.

Perhaps the most exciting revelations of 1997 came late in the year: the rediscovery of the "Ancient of Days" copy D (see illus. 3) and the discovery of a previously unknown letter of 1 Sept. 1800 from Blake to George Cumberland, three pages long and concluding with seven lines of verse. An article about the letter, with of course reproductions and a transcription, is now in preparation by Morton Paley and myself for publication in the next issue of this journal.

It is remarkable, as the twentieth century slouches to a close, that Blakean treasures of the sort recorded here are still coming to light. It gives the collector, curator, and materialist scholar hope for the next millennium. We are already seeing Blake reduced to 1 and 0, pixels per square inch (the modern equivalent of stipple engraving—of which Blake was both a master and a severe critic), and other Newtonian and discontinuous quantifications of the ideology of a line continuous in its minutest subdivisions (see Blake's letter to Cumberland, 12 April 1827, E 783); but the retardataire romanticists and children among us will continue to worship the Benjaminian "aura" of what they privilege as the original, the autographic. Photography has yet to destroy the market for paintings; the internet has yet to supersede the pieces of ink-spattered paper you are holding in your hands (or those that Blake held in his). "Progress" in this arena is supplementary, not supplantive. Just follow the money.

Sadly, I must again record the death of a fellow Blake collector. George Armin Goyder, associated for many years with the Blake Trust and other Blakean activities in Britain, died early in 1997. As I recorded in my 1995 sales review (Blake 29 [1996]: 111), two of the Blake tempera paintings from the Goyder collection, Christ the Mediator and The Flight into Egypt (Butlin #429, 404), are on long-term loan to the Tate Gallery; both were on public exhibit when I visited the Tate in late March and early April 1997. George was a dedicated Christian, long active in the Church of England. His religious faith and his love of Blake were intimately connected. Most appropriately, a memorial service was held on 2 April 1997 in St. James's Church, Piccadilly—the church in which Blake was baptized. Celebrations of George's life and achievements were presented by several of his business associates and friends, including Martin... characterized by flat and even printed surfaces. This key difference (as Joseph Viscomi was the first to observe) may be due to Blake's use of intaglio ink, while Frederick Tatham, who appears to have undertaken the posthumous printings, probably used a thinner relief ink. The numerous inking flaws in posthumous impressions, usually the result of weak inking in one or more areas, are easily distinguished from Blake's own reticulated patterns. The Whatman-type wove paper of this "Ancient of Days," .21 mm. thick, is within the range (approx. .16-.26 mm.) of papers Blake used in 1793-95. The recto verso impressions of Europe pls. 11 and 17 in my collection are on paper of only marginally heavier weight (.26 mm. thick) and almost identical in color, texture, and density. Since pl. 17 on this sheet is in the first of two states, it must have been printed by Blake. In contrast, posthumous impressions 4° and 5° from Europe copy c are on slightly thinner paper, .17 mm. thick, with a smoother and harder surface. The T STAINS/1813 paper used for posthumous copy L of Europe is exceptionally thin at only .12 mm.

Posthumous impressions of Blake's relief etchings are generally larger than those pulled by Blake himself (Bentley 67). This difference is probably due to Blake's dampening his paper, which then shrank during drying, while Tatham used dry paper (see Viscomi, Blake and the Idea of the Book [Princeton: Princeton UP, 1993] 99-100). The only posthumous impression of Europe pl. 1 available to me for measurement, present in copy L, is 2 mm. taller and 1 mm. wider than the print reproduced here. Thus its smaller dimensions suggest that this impression was printed by Blake, although I would hesitate to base a firm attribution on such slight differences alone. Yet the accumulated evidence concerning size, ink color and texture, printing style, and paper thickness and texture makes me reasonably confident that we can add the print reproduced here to the brief list (Fitzwilliam, Yale Center) of uncolored but handsomely-printed separate impressions of "The Ancient of Days" produced by Blake in 1794. All three may have been pulled by Blake as separate prints unrelated to the production of complete copies of Europe.

Bentley records the history of this print accurately, as part of the "Order" of the Songs volume, to the George C. Smith auction in 1938. He then states, p. 340, that this "Ancient of Days" was subsequently sold by the Philadelphia book dealer Charles Sessler to Moncure Biddle, and then "bought again at his [Biddle's] sale" by Sessler. However, no impression of Europe pl. 1 appears in the Biddle auction, Parke-Bernet, New York, 29-30 April 1952. Sessler's acquisition and sales records, xeroxed or carefully transcribed for me years ago by Michael Young, indicate the following provenance for this print from 1938 onwards: G. C. Smith sale, Parke-Bernet, 2 Nov. 1938, in #29, printed in "green" (sic) and "inlaid to size" (i.e., glued on all four margins of the verso to a backing sheet with a window cut into it to reveal the verso of the print), offered with Europe pls. 4° and 5° from copy c, both printed in "sepia" and similarly "inlaid to size" (Sessler, $245 plus a commission of 10% for Biddle); the "Ancient of Days" only on consignment with Sessler's from the Biddle collection by March 1957; acquired 28 March 1957 by "Dan[s?] Grubb" for $54; acquired by (or on consignment with) Sessler for $60 from Grubb, 13 Feb. 1964; sold by Sessler for $175 to Leonard Baskin, 30 June 1964. To this record I can add the sale, in May 1997, of this print by Baskin (through his son, the book dealer Josiah Baskin) to the San Francisco book dealer John Windle, and the purchase of the print by R. Essick from Windle in the same month. At some point after its 1938 sale at auction, the print was removed from the mounting sheet; evidence of its previous mounting is provided by the stained margins and glue spots still present on all four edges of the verso. The disfiguring propensities of this former attachment have percolated through to the recto and slightly stained its margins; other unprinted areas of the sheet are fresh and retain their original color and texture.

When printing from his copperplate of Europe pl. 1, Blake treated the figure’s lower right leg and foot in several different ways. The unique first-state impression (proof copy a, British Museum) shows that Blake etched a thick vertical line as a crude indication of the man’s right foot, but failed to articulate the relationship between foot and lower leg. The result is a gap (produced by an etched, recessed area that does not print) between the vague indications of the lower right leg and rudimentary foot. We see the same etched image in posthumous copy M (Fitzwilliam Museum). All other impressions printed by Blake show that he tried to handle this problematic area of his image in three different ways. In the final two impressions that he printed and colored (pl. 1 in copy K [Fitzwilliam Museum] and the separate impression in the Whitworth Institute, Manchester), Blake carefully painted in the lower right leg and foot. With the exception of the impression reproduced here and the proof in copy a, all others show that Blake tinted this area on each print to form a deeply-shadowed passage, in effect cancelling any attempt to represent the lower right leg or foot. This impression is close to the proof in copy a, but some ink has been dragged from the lower left portion of the right leg into the white area between leg and foot. Although this smeared ink looks at first glance like a mere accident, the specificity of its location suggests that Blake may have purposefully wiped some ink right to left on the plate (left to right in the impression) in an unsuccessful attempt to print the shadow he produced by hand tinting on most other impressions.

For further information about “The Ancient of Days,” see illus. 2-3 and their captions. The impressions presented in illus. 1 and 3 have not been reproduced since Muir’s facsimile of 1887 (illus. 2).

2 William Muir after William Blake, Europe pl. 1, 2nd (published) st., used in Muir’s 1887 facsimile of the illuminated book. Photo-lithograph printed in dark gray-blue, uncolored (proof?) impression, image 23.5 x 17 cm., printed framing lines 24.8 x 18.2 cm. Essick collection. On the cover sheet for his reproduction of Europe Muir states that “The Ancient of Days” is based on an original “in Mr. Muir’s possession.” As Bentley 339 states, the “Order” of the Songs volume, including pls. from Europe copy c, was in Muir’s possession from no later than 1886 to at least 1887, when the volume was offered for sale by Quaritch. Bentley further speculates (339, 489) that Europe pl. 1 in Muir’s 1887 facsimile was based on an impression in copy c. We are now in a position to confirm Bentley’s observations and be more specific about the basis of Muir’s work. The pattern of printing accidents, particularly along the right margin, indicates that the impression of “The Ancient of Days” reproduced here as illus. 1 was the model for Muir’s reproduction. The white area just left of the man’s right foot contains fragments of the ink smears present in illus. 1 (see its caption for Blake’s various treatments of this passage). Muir’s production methods would have led him to make a photo-lithograph from an uncolored original, in order to capture the etched image, and then color it according to some other impression (see illus. 3). The presence of framing lines, absent from Muir’s other reproductions of pls. from Europe, can be explained by the hand-drawn framing lines still present on the mounting sheets of other pls. bound with the “Order” of the Songs, including Europe, copy c, pls. 4* and 5*. Muir simply reproduced the hand-drawn framing lines on the mounting sheet to which the original (illus. 1) was then glued, even though these lines are not Blake’s work.
3 Europe pl. 1, the impression designated as “Ancient of Days” copy D in Bentley 109, 339, and 340. Relief and white-line etching, 1794, 2nd (published) st., printed in very dark blue (described as “black” in the George C. Smith auction cat., Parke-Bernet, 2 Nov. 1938, #28). Hand tinted in thin water-color washes, with strawberry-red filling the disc of the sun and some of the surrounding clouds. Image, plate-mark, and sheet size approx. the same as for illus. 1, above. This impression was shown in Sept. 1975 to Ruth Fine, Curator of the Rosenwald Collection, then located at the Alverthorpe Gallery, Jenkintown, Pennsylvania. She photographed the print and sent a black and white glossy photo to me in Oct. 1975. The illustration above was made from this photograph. In Dec. 1997, I was contacted by a friend of the present owner, a New York private collector. According to the owner, this is the impression sold from the A. E. Newton collection, Parke-Bernet, 16 April 1941, #130 ($175—perhaps not sold but “bought-in” at that price). Bentley 109 suggests that the Newton impression is the print now in the estate of George Goyder, but this seems unlikely because the Goyder impression is a Muir facsimile printed in golden yellow. The present owner of the impression reproduced here further states that it was formerly in the collections of Caroline Newton, A. E. Newton’s daughter, and the poet W. H. Auden (1907-1973), from whom he acquired the print by bequest. A color photo shown to me reveals that this impression is still mounted to a backing sheet with brown-ink framing lines typical of works bound with the “Order” of the Songs (see captions to illus. 1-2 for comments on these characteristics).

The reticulations in the ink of this print, so similar to those represented in illus. 1, indicate that it is an impression pulled by Blake. I have not seen the original, and thus hesitate to attribute the hand tinting to Blake or anyone else. The print was shown to Joseph Viscomi at the Pierpont Morgan Library in mid-January 1998. In his opinion, the impression was pulled by Blake but colored by another hand, perhaps many years later. Surprisingly, the colors and placement of the washes in this impression are generally consistent with what we see in colored impressions of Europe pl. 1 in Muir’s 1887 facsimile of the illuminated book. Thus, while the impression reproduced here as illus. 1 very probably served as Muir’s source for his photo-lithograph (illus. 2), this other impression of “The Ancient of Days,” then in Muir’s possession as part of the “Order” of the Songs volume, may have been the model for his hand coloring. If indeed this is the case, then it seems improbable that anyone in the Muir group added the coloring to the original, for why would anyone base a Blake facsimile on coloring known to be by someone else? Muir’s separate print of “The Ancient of Days” may have been printed from the same lithographic plate (or “zincograph”) from which the print in illus. 2 was pulled, but he printed the separate issue in golden yellow (rather than dark gray-blue) and colored it on the basis of a very different original (probably pl. 1 in Europe copy D, in the British Museum since 1859). A few examples of this separate facsimile were printed before the addition of the framing lines—or possibly from a different lithographic plate. Photo courtesy of Ruth Fine.
A considerable number of George's books were offered at auction by Christie's on 26 November in the same sale in which The Marriage of Heaven and Hell copy M was offered. The Blake lots within the scope of this review are listed, with the Goyder provenances noted, in the appropriate sections below.

The year of all sales and catalogues in the following lists is 1997 unless indicated otherwise. The auction houses add their purchaser's surcharge to the hammer price in their price lists. These net amounts are given here, following the official price lists. The value-added tax levied against the buyer's surcharge in Britain is not included. Late 1997 sales will be covered in the 1998 review. I am grateful for help in compiling this review to Elizabeth B. Bentley, G. E. Bentley, Jr., Sidney Berger, Michael Brand of Marlborough Rare Books, Michael Campbell, Detlef Dörbecke, Harriet Drummond of Christie's, John E. Grant, Robin Hamlyn of the Tate Gallery, Donald Heald, Thomas V. Lange of the Huntington Library (my source for many dealer catalogues recorded here), Nicholas Lott, Edward Mendelson, Patrick Noon (formerly of the Yale Center for British Art and now at the Minneapolis Museum of Art), Kimberly Orlijan, Kelly Pask of the Hood Museum of Art, Joseph Viscomi, Robert Wark, David Weinglass, John Windle, Henry Weymss of Sotheby's, and Andrew Wyld of Agnew's. Once again, Patricia Neill's editorial assistance and John Sullivan's electronic imaging have been invaluable.

Illuminated Books

Europe, pl. 1 ("The Ancient of Days"), from copy c. Relief and white-line etching, 2nd st., etched and printed in blue in 1794, image 23.4 x 16.8 cm., sheet of wove paper 24.4 x 17.7 cm. Acquired May by the dealer John Windle from Leonard Baskin through his son, the book dealer Josiah ("Josy") Baskin; acquired in the same month by R. Essick. See illus. 1-3.

The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, copy M (pls. 25-27, "A Song of Liberty," only). Relief etchings, 1790, printed in dark brown ink, pl. 25 in the 1st st., all but part of the heading of the "Chorus" on pl. 27 not printed. CL, 26 Nov., #166, pls. 25-26 (the inner opening) illus. color (£10,350 on an estimate of £10,000-15,000 to J. Windle acting for the Bentley collection, Toronto). See illus. 4 and the 2 illus. accompanying Bentley's "William Blake and His Circle," also appearing in this issue.

Manuscripts and Letters

Autograph letter signed but not dated from Blake to George Cumberland, postmark 1 Sept. 1800. 3 pages, concluding with 7 lines of verse. Previously unrecorded. Acquired late Nov. by R. Essick, with information provided by Morton Paley and the assistance of John Windle, from a British private collector. Reproduction, transcription, and essay forthcoming in the next issue of this journal.

First Editions of Blake's Writings First Published in Letterpress in Blake's Lifetime

Descriptive Catalogue, 1809. Marlborough Rare Books, Aug. private offer, lacking the "Index" leaf, wove paper with an "1807" watermark on leaves El, F1, and G1, "AP" watermark on leaves E3 and F3, with the address added by Blake in pen and ink on the title page (see illus. 5), further additions by Blake in pen and ink on pp. iv, 33, and 64 (the first 2 revisions unique to this copy; see illus. 6), George Cumberland's copy with his signature in pencil at the top of the title page, numerous passages side-lined in pencil, "N° 3" (probably a reference to the picture so numbered in the cat.) in pencil at the foot of p. 51, "N° 1-" in pencil at the foot of p. 53, "N° 2" in pencil at the foot of p. 54, "bounding form" repeated from the printed text in pencil at the foot of p. 64 (all these pencil inscriptions probably, and the last almost certainly, by Cumberland), a few passages side-lined in ink and "permanent" on p. 6 underlined in ink with "W L" (a reference to "white lead," referred to in the same printed sentence?) written in ink by an as-yet-unsigned hand above "permanent," note by Cumberland (signed "GC" and dated "1842")—see illus. 7 and its caption) in ink on the recto of the back free endpaper, autograph letter signed by John Linnell to "Dear Sir" (very probably Cumberland) dated 18 March 1833 pasted to inside front cover, autograph letter by Linnell to "M'Cumberland" (very probably George Cumberland, Jr.) dated 9 Jan. 1876 pasted to recto of front free endpaper, clipping of a printed letter by "Dora Greenwell" from a journal or newspaper (letter dated 27 Dec. 1875, titled "Vivisection," and concluded with 26 lines from Blake's "Auguries of Innocence") pasted to the inside back cover, pen and ink letter to "Dear Sir" (probably George Cumberland, Jr.) signed by Greenwell and dated 25 Jan. (no year, but almost certainly 1876 since it implies that the recipient had read the printed letter on vivisection) pasted to verso of back free endpaper, gray boards with fine pebble-grain blue cloth spine of c. 1830, 3 stab-holes from an earlier binding near the inner margin of all leaves, uncut, leaves 19 x 11 cm. (acquired Aug. by R. Essick). For further information, see the brief discussion in the introductory essay (above) and illus. 5-7 and their captions.

Drawings and Paintings

Satan Exulting over Eve. Planographic color print, 1795.43.2 x 53.4 cm. Butlin #291. Acquired March by the Tate Gallery, London, from John Craxton. See comments on this acquisition in the introductory essay, above.

Study for a Destroying Deity. Pencil, 45 x 61 cm., datable on stylistic grounds to c. 1820-25. Acquired by the Yale Center for British Art in 1977 and recently attributed to Blake by Patrick Noon. See illus. 8.

Study for the Last Judgment. Pencil, 36.8 x 26.3 cm. Inscribed lower right by Frederick Tatham, "William Blake/for his Last Judgment/[slight deleted] Frederick Tatham," further inscription on the verso making reference to 2 other Blake drawings. Butlin #643. CL, 8 April, #17, illus. (£12,075 on an estimate of £4000-6000). The purchaser has not responded to my inquiry, kindly passed on by Harriet Drummond of Christie's London. See the introductory essay to this sales review for an irresistible speculation about the identity of the new owner.

Thenot and Colinet Converse Seated Beneath Two Trees and For Him Our Yearly Wakes and Feasts We Hold, 2 preliminary drawings for the 1821 Virgil wood engravings. Pencil, pen, and gray wash, 3.5 x 9.5 cm. and 3.7 x 9.5 cm. Butlin #769.2, 769.13. SL, 13 Nov., #56, illus. color (£71,900 to N. Lott for R. Essick on an estimate of £8000-12,000). See illus. 9 and Appendix 2.

Separate Plates and Plates in Series

A modern bound folio vol. containing engravings by Blake pasted to rectos only of its leaves, including both separate pls. and pls. removed from books, Adam Mills, Nov. cat. 42, #237, modern quarter morocco portfolio, some leaves blank, others with evidence of the removal of prints, "full listing [of contents] available on request" (£1500; acquired by J. Windle for stock). Courtesy of Windle, I inspected this vol. early in Jan. 1998 and found the following prints: "Rev. John Caspar Lavater" trimmed to the image, tears in corners (Essick impression 3N); Wit's Magazine, pl. 4; Darwin, Botanic Garden, pl. 1; Hayley, Life of Cowper, pls. 1-2 (1st sts.); Muir facsimile of Little Tom the Sailor, laid paper, folds reinforced on verso; Blair, The Grave, [1870] folio with 1813 imprints, pls. 3, 5, 6; "M" Q," Blake after Villiers, minor foxing (Essick impression 2H); Rees, Cyclopædia, pls. 1-3B, 4-7; "Christ Trampling on Satan," Butts after Blake, heavy wave paper, fine impression with full margins (impression not in Essick); Shakespeare, Plays, both pls. after Fuseli, worn (and thus probably from the 9-vol. issue); Novelist's Magazine, pl. 2 for Don Quixote, 2nd st., pls. 1-3 for Sir Charles Grandison, 1st sts., pl. 1 for Sentimental Journey, 1st st.

"Chaucers Canterbury Pilgrims." CNY, 13 May, #203, 5th st. but "with faint traces of the drypoint inscriptions" of the 4th st., laid India (and thus probably a Colnaghi impression), scattered foxing, pale staining in margins, illus. (£2070). Swann, 22 May, #118, 5th st. on laid India (and thus very probably a Colnaghi impression), small margins (£7762 to the dealer J. Windle for stock).

Dante engravings. Donald Heald, Feb. San Francisco Book Fair, complete set, printing uncertain but probably c. 1892, the Moncure Biddle and Garden Inc. copy, full green morocco folding case ($50,000). Both Heald and I have seen several sets (including the next below) in the same style of morocco folding case, probably made c. 1880-1910. Perhaps such cases were supplied by the Linnell family to customers who bought sets of the Dante pls. directly from them. Heritage Book Shop, March cat. for the New York Book Fair, #18, complete set, printing uncertain but probably c. 1892, with the printed label, full green morocco folding case, Philip Hofer's copy with his bookplate ($45,000). Pls. 1, 2, 5-6 only, the 1st on laid India, the other 3 fine and early impressions directly on laid paper, acquired 1st half of 1997 by the Hood Museum of Art, Dartmouth College, Hanover, New Hampshire, by bequest from Adolph Weil, Jr., who acquired the prints from the London dealer William Weston, who had acquired them (plus pls. 3 and 7 on laid paper) at CL, 29 June 1989, #13, pl. 2 illus. (£24,200 to Weston). CL, 26 June, #18, complete set on laid India, probably the 1892 printing, a few foxmarks, loose in modern
4 The Marriage of Heaven and Hell pl. 25–26 from copy M (containing pls. 25–27, "A Song of Liberty," only). Bentley collection, Toronto. Relief engravings, 1790, printed in dark brown ink, pl. 25 in the 1st st., all but part of the heading of the "Chorus" on pl. 27 not printed, on a single sheet of "laid" (according to Christie's auction cat. of 26 Nov. 1997, but actually wove) paper folded down the middle to form a pamphlet of 2 leaves, sheet approx. 19.9 x 24.3 cm. "three" (according to the auction cat., but actually 2) deckle edges top and one side, other edges torn and/or cut (edges of the sheet not shown in this illus.). When folded into two leaves, the first recto is blank but bears an inscription probably by Frank Rinder: "Pages from Blake's 'Marriage of Heaven and Hell' (pubd in 1790) (Etched by Blake)."

Opening shown here bearing pls. 25 (on the left, the verso of the 1st leaf) and 26 (on the right, the recto of the 2nd leaf). Pl. 27 is on the final verso (thus, on the back of pl. 26). The unusual format, with the recto of the first leaf (in effect, "page 1") blank and the concluding "Chorus" not printed, might indicate that Blake intended to fill these absences with texts and/or designs, printed or in manuscript (a possibility suggested to me by Joseph Viscomi in correspondence). In comparison to The Marriage of Heaven and Hell copy L (Essick collection), copy M has very narrow inner margins, with a distance between the two plates shown here of only about 1.5 cm. (8.5 cm. in copy L). Provenance: Acquired by John Linnell, probably directly from Blake or his widow; sold posthumously from the Linnell collection, Christie's, 15 March 1918, #198 (£8.18.6d. to the dealer Tregaskis acting for Frank Rinder); sold or given by Rinder to an unknown British collector; probably by inheritance to the vendor at Christie's London, 26 Nov. 1997, #166 (£10,350 to John Windle acting for the Bentley collection, Toronto). See also the two illus. accompanying Bentley's "William Blake and His Circle" published in this issue. Photo courtesy of Christie's London.

cloth portfolio, from the collection of George Goyder, "Whirlwind of Lovers" illus. (not sold; estimate £15,000-20,000); same copy, CL, 26 Nov., #169, same illus. (£12,650 to J. Windle for stock).

Job engravings. Maggs, June private offer, first printing after removal of "Proof" inscriptions (although a few fragments remain on some pls.), on J Whatman Turkey Mill 1825 paper trimmed to 29.5 x 25 cm., 19th-century quarter morocco over cloth, Job label recently pasted by Maggs to the inside front cover, pencil inscription on the front free endpaper ("John & Myfanwy [the artist John Piper and his wife, Myfanwy Evans] with love from K [according to Maggs, the art historian Kenneth Clark, later Lord Clark] Christmas 1945"), with fragments of erased pencil inscriptions between the lower borders of the images and the lower platemarks on some pls., apparently written (and then partly erased?) by Piper, probably used by Piper when he was designing costumes and sets for a production of the Job ballet first presented in 1948 (acquired by J. Windle for R. Essick). SL, 24 June, complete set, 1st printing after removal of "Proof" inscriptions, apparently on Whatman paper, "wide margins," slight foxing, framed, pl. 3 illus. (£6325). CL, 26 June, #19, title and 19 of 21 pls. only (lacking pls. inscribed 6 and 9), on J Whatman 1825 paper, first printing after removal of "Proof" inscriptions, "wide margins," some foxing in margins, loose in an album, pls. 3 and 14 illus. (not sold; estimate £12,000-15,000); #20, complete set on laid India, 1874 printing, "wide margins," a few foxmarks, apparently loose, pls. 2 and 16 illus. (not sold; estimate £5500-6500). Simon Finch, July cat. 31, #19, complete set, published "Proof" issue on India laid on J Whatman Turkey Mill 1825 backing paper, trimmed slightly to 38.4 x 26.8 cm., interleaved with tissue guards, "original drab paper wrappers and spine laid down and bound in at the end," original printed label (unpriced) on a front endpaper, "Linnell's autograph advertisement for the work" (see Note below) laid down on a front endpaper, half morocco (£26,000); same copy and price, Nov. cat. 32, #18, pl. 8 illus. Sims Reed, Oct. cat., #367, complete set, published "Proof" issue on India laid on vove (watermarks, if any, not recorded), apparently loose (or at least the dealer makes no mention of a binding), title page (showing considerable foxing) and pl. 13 illus. (£28,500); same copy and price, Dec. cat., #60. CL, 26 Nov., #168, "Proof" issue on "French" paper, some light spotting, some repaired holes in margins, "original red paper boards with variant original title label pasted on upper cover, ...in its original box as described by Linnell?", pl. 6 illus. (£16,100). CL, 9 Dec., #2, 20 (of 22 pls.) only, including the title plate, on J Whatman 1825 paper, first printing after removal of "Proof" inscriptions, "wide margins," some slight staining, housed in a album, pls. 3 and 14 illus. (not sold; estimate £8000-12,000).

A Note on Linnell's Job Advertisement. The copy of the Job "Proof" issue offered by the London dealer Simon Finch, as listed above, is said in Finch's cat. 31 to include a manuscript "Advertisement" for the engravings written (but not signed) by John Linnell. According to the Finch cat., this Advertisement reads as follows: "Blake's Illustrations of the Book of Job. Consisting of 22 Plates engraved by himself upon Copper from his own Designs. Price to subscribers [£]3.3[s.] Proof on India paper [£]5.5[s.] Subscriptions [£]1. received by the Author Wm. Blake. 3 Fountain Court, Strand or Mr. J. Linnell 6. Cirencester Place Fitzroy Square. These Plates are engraved entirely by Mr Blake with the graver only (that is without the aid of aqua fortis)." The final, important sentence about the method of executing the plates repeats a statement found in a "note" by Linnell among the Ivimy papers (see BR 234nl). My own study of the Job engravings over the last 32 years confirms Linnell's claim, except that Blake used preliminary drypoint sketching in both the central and border designs of the Job engravings.

"Rev. John Caspar Lavater," Blake after an unknown artist. Groversnor Print Shop, March private offer, bridge of nose badly rubbed, cut close (£75).

"Venus Dissuades Adonis from Hunting," Blake after R. Cosway, 1787. SL, Nov. 13, #704, the only traced impression of the 1st st. with the imprint, not recorded in Essick, illus. (£690 to the dealer Nicholas Lott for stock).

5 Title page of Blake, A Descriptive Catalogue, 1809. George Cumberland's copy, with his pencil signature at the top. Blake has added in pen and ink the address of the exhibition's venue just above the double rule (as in copies C, D, F-H, J, L, and O). For records about Cumberland's acquisition of this copy in Nov. 1809, as well as a second copy for his friend B. Barry, see BR 219-20. Essick collection. See also illus. 6-7.

Letterpress Books with Engravings by and after Blake, Including Prints Extracted From Such Books

Blair, The Grave. D & D Galleries, Feb. private offer, 1808 quarto, uncut in original boards rebacked with cloth, cover

Bürger, Leonora, 1796. Ursus Books, March private offer, modern morocco, inscription at foot of pl. 1, "alter'd" from Young's Night Thoughts, partly trimmed off (price on request).

Cumberland, Outlines from the Antients, 1829. Adam Mills, March cat. 40, #147, large-paper issue with the pls. on laid India, some spotting, the Duke of Bedford's copy, contemporary calf (£1750); same copy, Nov. cat. 42, #73 (£1450). Cumberland, Thoughts on Outline, 1796. Phillip Pirages, April cat. 39, inscribed "from the author" on leaf before title, original boards uncut and unopened, new paper spine, some wear, 1 (spotted) pl. illus. (£1900). There seems to be no market for this copy; it has appeared in numerous Pirages' cat. over the last 3 years.

Darwin, Poetical Works, 1806. Grovesnor Print Shop, March private offer, "Fertilization of Egypt" only, Blake after Fuseli, stained (not priced).

Flaxman, Hesiod designs, 1817. Powell's Books, Oct. Internet cat., a late reprinting with imprints worn off or removed, foxed, boards recovered in heavy paper, original cover label (an impression of the half-title) reattached ($125).

Flaxman, Iliad designs, 1805. Robert Clark, Feb. cat. 46, #257, minor foxing, original boards rebacked with cover label worn (£175). Waterfield's, Sept. cat. 169, #70, bound with Flaxman's Odyssey designs (1805), some marginal tears and waterstaining, light spotting throughout, 20th-century half roan (£185). CSK, 26 Sept., #160, bound with Flaxman's Odyssey designs (1805), marginal staining to 1 pl., contemporary half roan (£218.50).

Fuseli, Lectures, 1801. Maggs, April private offer, contemporary calf (price on inquiry).

6 Blake, A Descriptive Catalogue, 1809. P. 33 in George Cumberland's copy (now Essick collection), with the quoted "epigram" altered by Blake in pen and ink to read "...spider, mole, & Bat" in the first line (and thus create a rhyme with "fat" in the second line). This revision preserves the iambic pentameter rhythm of the couplet and accords with the version Blake wrote on p. 36 of his Notebook (see E 508). I can find no record of any other copy of A Descriptive Catalogue containing this revision. Other manuscript revisions by Blake in this copy include three diagonal pen-and-ink lines cancelling "and" between "Titian and Correggio" and between "Raphael and Albert Durer" on p. iv of the "Preface" (both are I believe unique revisions); and, on p. 64, the scratching-out in pen and ink of "of want," with the addition of a caret with "want of" in pen and ink above the printed line before "idea," so that the phrase reads "evidences the want of idea in the artist's mind," as similarly altered by Blake with pen and ink in copies B-D, F-H, J, L, and O.

Hayley, Ballads, 1805. Adam Mills, Nov. cat. 42, #114, original boards rebacked with paper, "original spine label retained," no mention of pts. of the pls. 36 pp. publisher’s cat. bound in (£375). See also under Blair, The Grave, above.

Hayley, Essay on Sculpture, 1800. Adam Mills, March cat. 40, #142, with the errata slip, the Gordon Castle copy, contemporary half calf (£300).

Hayley, Life of Romney, 1809. Adam Mills, March cat. 40, #145, contemporary half calf, joints cracking (£400); same copy, Nov. cat. 42, #115 (£350).

Hayley, Triumphs of Temper, 1803. Quaritch, Jan. private offer, large-paper issue, contemporary calf (£1200). Adam Mills, March cat. 40, #143, large-paper issue, contemporary calf rebacked (£600). Ken Spelman, April cat. 35, #122, apparently small-paper issue, contemporary calf rebacked, pl. 5 illus. (£140). Lawson, Aug. cat. 285, #67, apparently small-paper issue, fine and decorative mid-19th-century calf (£245). Phillip Pirages, Oct. cat. 40, #153, large-paper issue, "plates...moderately foxed," modern half calf, pl. 4 illus. (£1500). CL, 26 Nov. #101, large-paper issue, inscribed "From the Author" on the half-title, pls. hand colored "apparently by Blake" (Bentley 579), contemporary half roan rebacked, from the collection of George Goyder, pl. 5 illus. (£4024 on an estimate of £1000-1500 to the dealer Barry Marks). John Windle, the San Francisco book dealer who specializes in Blake, inspected the colored copy noted above. He found the coloring opaque, crude in places, and unsympathetic to the underlying engraved image. In his opinion, the coloring is definitely not by Blake. Elizabeth B. Bentley also studied the book; she found the coloring a little more attractive than did Windle, but came to the same conclusion about attribution. The price suggests that Marks has a different opinion.

Hoare, Inquiry, 1806. Adam Mills, March cat. 40, #144, contemporary marbled boards rebacked in calf (£450); same copy, Nov. cat. 42, #124 (£400).
A note by George Cumberland, written in pen and ink on the recto of the back free endpaper of his copy of Blake, A Descriptive Catalogue, 1809 (now Essick collection). A transcription follows:

They say Blake was mad. If so Shakespeare & Milton was [corrected in pencil to “were”] so too. Blake was a man of imagination Consequently a decided original - he could not be brought to place learning above inspiration.

The best artists of our day are mere imitators very good in their way. The moment they trust to their imaginations all is over. All works of Art require some effort of the mind to give them a charm. GC 1842[?].

The date concluding this note looks suspiciously like “1849” at first glance. Such a date is disturbingly problematic, given the strong evidence that Cumberland died on 8 August 1848 (according to information supplied by G. E. Bentley, Jr., based on a printed obituary of Cumberland). However, as Kimberly Orlijan has pointed out to me, the concluding numeral looks like Cumberland’s “2,” as written elsewhere in the volume, but with only a slight suggestion of the horizontal base. Thus, my best guess is that the date is 1842.

This copy of A Descriptive Catalogue also contains two letters from John Linnell, the earlier pasted to the inside front cover and the later pasted to the recto of the front free endpaper. Transcriptions follow:

Bayswater

March 18th 1833

Dear Sir [almost certainly George Cumberland]

Having just returned from the country I find your very beautiful figure on my mantle shelf and feel much indebted to you for it.

As to Mr. Blake’s works I do not think any person ever possessed a complete set - not even Blake himself[:] what has become of his plates I know not - as Mr. Blake left all she had not sold to a person [Frederick Tatham] who has since then been a Bankrupt or something like it and I suppose has disposed of what he had - I have some of his best Drawings and the Job which I shall be happy to shew to your friends.

I am D’r Sir

yours truly

J. Linnell

According to Alexander Gilchrist, Life of William Blake (London and Cambridge: Macmillan, 1863) 1: 126, “The gentleman [Tatham] from whom they [the 10 copperplates for Songs of Innocence and of Experience electrotyped by Gilchrist] were obtained had once the entire series in his possession; but all save these ten were stolen by an ungrateful black he had befriended, who sold them to a smith as old metal.” Tatham (1805-78) is very probably the source for this story of a theft that may have included many copperplates for the illuminated books besides those for the Songs. Linnell’s letter, quoted above, suggests that Tatham himself sold the plates for financial reasons. Linnell, however, did not think kindly of Tatham and, as this letter makes clear, only “suppose[s]” that Tatham sold the plates.

Redstone wood Red Hill Surrey

Jan 9 - 1876

Dear Mr Cumberland [almost certainly George Cumberland, Jr.]

As you were the first to introduce me to Blake you are entitled to any information respecting him, but all I have to say about him at present is that the Burlington Art Club are going to exhibit some of his works[:] I am very unwell just now though very thankful looking to the Author & finisher of our Faith - not looking to clergy or prayer books made by them but the best prayer book - The Book of Psalms in Hebrew & greek[:] Congleton’s translation I recommend to you because there is the proper Jehovah in its place & not Lord instead which word Lord is also in its place & so there is sense and not confusion. (James & Hawkins 70 Welbeck St. W. London)

I am yours truly

John Linnell Seni

In his “Autobiography,” Linnell notes that he first visited Blake “in company with the younger Mr Cumberland”—see BR 257.

"End of vol 1" partly scraped off the title page, contemporary half morocco worn (£977). BBA, 22 May, #119, Blake's pl. only on laid paper (and thus the 2nd proof st. or the 1st or 2nd published st.s?), horizontal crease, rubbed and spotted, with "Paul before Felix" after Hogarth and an engraved portrait of Nelson (not sold; estimate £120-180). SL, 12 June, #338, undated Baldwin and Craddock ed., 132 pls. on 92 leaves only, no mention of Blake's pl. (£1127); #339, undated Baldwin and Craddock ed., 115 pls., slightly spotted, contemporary half morocco rubbed and soiled (not sold; estimate £1000-1500). SL, 22 Oct., #4, Blake's pl. disbound, st. not recorded, trimmed within the platemark, damaged at margins, with 10 other pls. after Hogarth (not sold; estimate £400-600). SL, 27 Nov., #227, undated Baldwin and Craddock ed., 115 leaves of pls., contemporary morocco worn (£920).

Lawson, Aug. cat. 285, #46, imprint on engraved title cropped (as usual), contemporary half calf rebacked, original spine retained (£1750).

Josephus, Works. CE, 9 April, #146, probably Bentley D or E issue, overall light browning, later half calf, with another vol. unrelated to Blake (£552).

Lavater, Aphorisms. Quaritch, Jan. private offer, 1788 ed., 1st st. of the pl., lacking the half-title, some spotting, half calf repaired (£600); same copy and price, Nov. cat. 1243, #135. Roe and More Rare Books, April private offer, 1794 ed., 2nd st. of the pl. rubbed at top, later quarter calf (£60). Robert Clark, Nov. cat. 49, #176, 1788 ed., minor foxing, "End of vol 1" partly scraped off the title page, contemporary half rebacked, old spine retained (£165).

Lavater, Essays on Physiognomy. Robert Few, Jan. cat. 9, #93, 1810 ed., 3 vols., lacking the half-titles to the 2nd parts of vols. 2 and 3, some minor spotting, contemporary morocco (£1500); #94, 1810 ed., 3 vols. in 5, some minor spotting, contemporary russia rebacked (£850). John Windle, Feb. cat. 27, #38, "1789-1792" (but actually 1789-98) ed., 3 vols. in 5, with a proof of 1 pl. (not by Blake), slight foxing or darkening, contemporary half morocco worn, joints repaired, Blake's pl. 2 illus. (£4000). Bernard Shapero, Feb. San Francisco Book Fair, "1792" (i.e., c. 1818?) ed., 3 vols. in 5, vol. 1 lacking the Contents leaf, contemporary morocco richly gilt (£1250). SL, 11 April, #833, 1789-98 ed., 3 vols. in 5, contemporary calf worn, some covers detached or missing, with Lodge, Portraits of Illustrious Personages of Great Britain, 1821-34 (£230); #914, 1789-98 ed., 3 vols. in 5, some browning, contemporary morocco (£690).

Marlborough Rare Books, May cat. 171, #293, 1789-98 ed., 3 vols. in 5, contemporary morocco (£1500). Auctiones AG/ Moirandant Company AG auction, Basel, 4 Dec., 1792 (i.e., 1818?) ed., 3 vols. in 5, contemporary morocco richly gilt (no price information; estimate DM2400).

Malkin, Father's Memoirs, 1806. Simon Finch, Aug. cat. 31, #20, pls. slightly foxed and browned, inscribed "For Dr Pett / With the Author's Compliments," later morocco "rubbed in places" (£950). Maggs, Sept. cat. 1235, #30, uncut in original boards, later cloth spine (£350). CL, 26 Nov., #104, "original cloth-backed boards" (but the boards were originally backed with paper, not cloth), worn, morocco slipcase; with Hoare, Inquiry, 1806, original boards worn, Salzmann, Elements of Morality, 1792, 3 vols., "imperfect," Enfield, Speaker, 1805 (which does not contain Blake's pl.), Lavater, Aphorisms, 1788, Montgomery, ed., The Chimney-Sweeper's Friend, 1825, and Macdonald, A Book of Strife, 1880 (any connection to Blake?); all from the collection of George Goyder (£1840 on an estimate of £700-1000).

Salzmann, Elements of Morality, 1799. BBA, 21 Aug., #128, 3 vols., 51 pls., some crudely hand colored, contemporary calf very worn, some covers detached; with Helme, History of England (1804), and 10 other children's books unrelated to Blake (Canterbury Bookshop, £805 on an estimate of £60-80).

Scott, Poetical Works, 1782. Adam Mills, March cat. 40, #138, contemporary half calf rebacked (£360).

8. Study for a Destroying Deity. Pencil, 45 x 61 cm., datable on stylistic grounds to c. 1820-25. Yale Center for British Art; accession no. B1997.14.6079. Not in Butlin. Recently attributed to Blake by Patrick Noon (supported by David Bindman) and identified by Noon as a preliminary sketch for the pencil, pen and water-color drawing of the same subject in the Philadelphia Museum of Art (Butlin #778). See Noon, The Human Form Divine: William Blake from the Paul Mellon Collection, exhibition catalogue (New Haven: Yale Center for British Art) 2, 82 (not reproduced). Acquired 1963 by Paul Mellon as part of the Thomas E. Lowinsky collection (whose collection mark appears near the lower left corner of the drawing); given by Mellon to the Yale Center for British Art in 1977. Although the treatment of the stomach muscles is unusual for Blake, the attribution seems convincing to me. In the more finished version of the design, the figure's bat-like wings (only sketched in outline in the Yale drawing) extend above his arms and the twisted forms in his hands terminate, at their lower ends, in tridents (suggesting lightning bolts?). Reproduced by permission of the Yale Center for British Art, New Haven, Connecticut.

Stuart and Revett, Antiquities of Athens, 1762-1816. SL, 19 May, #254, 4 vols., lacking 1 pl. in vol. 2, some foxing and dampstaining, later Russia rebacked, 1 (non-Blake) pl. illus. (£7475). SL, 26 June, #318, 4 vols., some foxing and dampstaining, half calf worn (£6900).

Varley, Zodiacal Physiognomy, 1828. Adam Mills, June cat. 41, #22, lacking "Plates 5 & 6" (apparently corresponding to Bentley's pls. 2-3) and "2pp astrological tables," all provided "in modern facsimile" (i.e., xeroxes?), later half calf (£245). A rather steep price for a copy which would appear to lack 2 out of the 3 pls. by Blake.

with blind tooling on covers (not present in most copies I’ve seen), gilt spine (£12,500); same copy and price, Dec. cat., #69. Quaritch, Nov. private offer, vol. 1 only, original sheep, from the collection of the artist John Piper (£12,500).

Cl. 26 Nov., #102, 2 vols., later calf, from the collection of George Goyder, pl. 27 (oddly, the engraving of “Epicurus” rather than a page of the famous wood engravings) illus. (£5175 on an estimate of £2000-3000).

Wollstonecraft, Original Stories, 1791. John Windle, Jan. private offer, 3rd sts. of all pls., modern binding (price on application). This is the only copy of the 1791 ed. I can recall seeing with the 3rd sts., which usually appear in the 1796 ed. Heritage Book Shop, Sept. private offer, most pls. in the rare 1st sts., paper throughout evenly browned, full morocco by Riviere, all edges gilt (£4500). John Hart, Sept. cat. 43, #31, pl. 4 (and probably all other pls.) in 2nd st., repaired tear in pl. 1, “contemporary-style full sheep,” pl. 4 illus. (£1250).

Young, Night Thoughts, 1797, uncolored copies. John Windle, Jan. private offer, with the Explanation leaf, fly-title to Night the Second in the 2nd st., uncut, early (original?) marbled boards, spine worn away, internally very clean with only minor offsets from the pls. (price on inquiry). A & Y Cumming, Feb. cat. 3, #7, with the Explanation leaf (marginal tears repaired), margins “slightly shaved,” contemporary morocco (£10,000). Buddenbrooks, Feb. San Francisco Book Fair, with the Explanation leaf, some pls. trimmed, a very clean copy, later full calf (£9000). SL. 22 May, #88, lacking Explanation leaf, some offsetting of the pls., a few tears, contemporary half calf worn, pl. 5 illus. (£2530). Heritage Book Shop, Oct. cat. for the Boston Book Fair, #11, with the Explanation leaf, fly-title to Night the Second in the 2nd st., slightly trimmed to approx. 42.5 x 32.5 cm., very minor spotting, modern quarter calf (£10,000). Sims Reed, Oct. cat., #371, no mention of the Explanation leaf (and thus not present?), no mention of trimming or leaf size, half calf, pls. 24 and 31 illus. (£6000); Dec. cat., #71, uncut in original blue boards “cloth backed” (cloth not original?), blue endpapers, no mention of the Explanation leaf (£12,000). CL. 26 Nov., #167, with the Explanation leaf, fly-title to Night the Second in the uncommon 1st st., trimmed to approx. 41.2 x 30.7 cm., some offsetting, contemporary half morocco (£4025).

Interesting Blakeana

J. Boehme, Works, the so-called “Law’s edition,” 1764-81. SL. 10 April, #200, 4 vols., spotted, no indication of the condition of the illus. with their many and delicate hinged overlays (often torn or missing), lacking half-title and errata leaf in vol. 4, contemporary russia worn, covers detached (£2990—for what I suspect is not a good copy—on an estimate of £300-500). The ed. of Boehme known to Blake and perhaps owned by him—see his comment to Henry Crabb Robinson on the beauty of the “figures” (i.e., the illus.) in “Law’s transl.” (BR 313).

T. Macklin, Poetic Description of Choice & Valuable Prints, 1794. Adam Mills, March cat. 40, #13, with a presentation inscription from Thomas Bewick to his daughter dated 1799, original glazed green wrappers respined with modern paper, corners repaired (£200). A rare sale cat. offering 4 of Blake’s separate copy engravings after Stothard, Meheux, and Watteau (2).

The Poetry of Various Glee, 1798. Adam Mills, March cat. 40, #140, original calf rebacked (£155). The frontispiece is signed by William Staden Blake of Exchange Alley, an engraver who was in the past confused with the eponymous hero (patrarchial hegemonist?) of this journal. For another W. S. Blake pl., see illus. 13.

C. H. Tatham, Etchings, Representing the Best Examples of Ancient Architecture, 1799. Simon Finch, Nov. cat. 32, #157, contemporary calf slightly worn (£1850). “Mr. William Blake” appears in the list of subscribers (see Bentley 697-98).

W. S. Blake, engraver of Exchange Alley. 2 engravings, c. 1800-10?, for letterheads or insurance forms of the Albion Insurance Company, not previously recorded. Both after designs by Richard Corbould (1757-1831). Image 11.5 x 19.1 cm., signed “W. Blake sc.”; image 11 x 18.9 cm., signed “Blake sc’Change Alley” (see illus. 13). Questor Rare Books, April private offer, included in an album of 20 insurance company engravings, with a duplicate of the pl. signed “W. Blake sc.” (acquired by R. Essick). Duplicate pl. and the non-“Blake” pls. in the portfolio given to the Huntington Library.

W. Falconer, The Shipwreck, 1804. Howes, April cat. 274, #72, contemporary russia worn (£85). In a letter of 4 May 1804, Blake thanks Hayley for a copy of this ed. (Bentley 687).

A. Hay, History of Chichester, 1804. Marlborough Rare Books, Nov. cat. 173, #171, contemporary calf worn (£130). Blake probably owned a copy—see Bentley 687-88.

9 Thenot and Colinet Converse Seated beneath Two Trees (top) and "For Him Our Yearly Wakes and Feasts We Hold" (bottom), two preliminary drawings for the 1821 Virgil wood engravings. Pencil, pen, and wash, 3.5 x 9.5 cm. and 3.7 x 9.5 cm. Butlin #769.2, 769.13. Essick collection. Both drawings show a small abraded patch top center. This area on Thenot and Colinet contains fragments of a partly-erased inscription—almost certainly the single word "Colinet." This inscription is in a brown ink clearly distinct from the black ink Blake used in the design. I suspect that this (title?) inscription was written by Blake at a time subsequent to the composition of the design or, more probably, by John Linnell when he first acquired the drawings. The similar area on the lower drawing illus. here shows only tiny fragments of an inscription which I cannot decipher. The reproductions of all the extant Virgil drawings in Butlin show similar abraded areas, all top center, on #769.3, 7, 9, and 11. Detailed inspection of the originals may reveal more about these previously-unnoticed inscriptions and their subsequent erasure, partial or complete.

Proofs of the wood engraving of Thenot and Colinet pulled before the blocks were cut down for publication show slightly more of the tree on the right. The fruits hanging from the tree along the left margin in the drawing are smaller and higher in the untrimmed wood engraving; the dog (lower right) can hardly be seen in the latter. There are no extant pre-publication proofs of the block bearing "For Him Our Yearly Wakes." The published wood engraving does not show the tree on the right, but it may have been on the block before it was reduced. The neoclassical building in the background is larger and more prominent in the wood engraving, with its portico shifted to the right, behind the female harpist. For a general discussion of the role of the preliminary drawings in relation to the relief etching of four Virgil designs and to the later wood engravings, see Robert N. Essick, "A Relief Etching of Blake's Virgil Illustrations," Blake 25 (1991-92): 117-27. See also Appendix 2 in this sales review for the present ownership of the drawings and proofs.

I. Reed, sale cat. of his collection, King and Lochee, 1807. BBA, 24 April, #397, contemporary russia worn, covers detached (Maggs, £149). Lot 6577 is Blake's Poetical Sketches, sold for 6s.6d.

Anon., Letters from an Irish Student in England to His Father in Ireland, 1809. Ximenes Rare Books, Sept. private offer, 2 vols. in 1, 19th-century quarter calf worn and chipped (£265). "As you have heard so much of Mr. Fuzeli, I fear you would suspect that I have negligently passed over his works, were I to omit mentioning him here. If such an apprehension did not operate, I should certainly scarcely think he merited notice in this letter. He has modestly asserted, I am told, that he paints for posterity. I sincerely hope he will afford them more gratification than he does his contemporaries. He has a great admirer and defender, I believe the only one, in a Mr. W. Blake, a miserable engraver, and one of the most eccentric men of the age. This man has hailed him as the modern Michael Angelo" (2:139).

J. Thomas, Religious Emblems, 1809. Alex Fotheringham, Jan. cat. 29, #135, uncut in printed boards, new spine (£190). Blake is listed among the subscribers to this emblem book authored by the man who commissioned some of Blake’s water-color illustrations to Milton’s poetry.
Anon., Travels in South America, Dublin: John Jones, 1824. W. & V. Dailey, April private offer, contemporary calf rebacked ($100; acquired by R. Essick). This vol. contains crude, unsigned and untitled wood engravings of Blake's pls. 4 ("The Meco & Kishie Kishie Monkeys," reversed) and 5 ("The Skinning of the Aboma Snake, shot by Cap. Stedman") first published in J. G. Stedman, Narrative of a Five Years' Expedition, against the Revolted Negroes of Surinam (1796). The wood engravings face pp. 162 and 166 in the 1824 vol. As the "Preface," p. [5], in the Travels explains, its text, intended for "young Readers," is based on "the most authentic and recent accounts of Travellers" to South America, but these have been transformed into a narrative about "a fictitious personage." Accordingly, the facing page texts describe the monkeys and the snake as seen by a character named "Philips" rather than Stedman.

A. and J. Taylor, City Scenes, 1828. Stuart Bennett, March cat. 26, #230, original boards rebacked, original roan spine retained ($250). Adam Mills, March cat. 40, #146, some foxing, quarter morocco rebacked (£325); same copy, Nov. cat. 42, #221 (£275). Contains Blake's "Holy Thursday" from Songs of Innocence with an engraved illus. unrelated to Blake's design.

R. Heber, sale cat. of his collection, Evans and Sotheby, 1834-36. BBA, April 24, #372, parts 1-11 (of 13) only, some prices and buyers' names inscribed, modern cloth (Laywood, £276). Lot 99 is Blake's Poetical Sketches, sold for 2s.

R. Southey, The Doctor, 1834-47. Simon Finch, Aug. cat. 31, #437, 1st ed., 7 vols., contemporary half calf worn (£750). References to Blake in chapters 181 and 214 are "important for the suggestion that William Owen was the source of Blake's knowledge of Welsh history and literature" (Bentley 918).

Songs of Innocence and of Experience, Pickering ed., 1839. Quaritch, Jan. private offer, 1st issue with "The Little Vagabond," publisher's cloth binding that varies from all other copies I have seen, the blind-stamped cartouche on both covers smaller and differently configured, "Blake's Poems," stamped in gilt on the spine rather than on the front cover, rebacked with the original spine retained, recto of front free endpaper signed by the editor, J. J. Garth Wilkinson, and dated 16 July 1839 (the week after the printed date of the Preface, p. xxi), with a further presentation inscription on the title page, "From J. J. G. & E. A. Wilkinson as a token of affectionate remembrance to Miss Walsh, London, 1844," extra-illus. with water colors of the title pages to Songs of Innocence and Songs of Experience, these illus. perhaps (but by no means certainly) by the William Muir circle of facsimilists (acquired by R. Essick through J. Windle). This copy, with its variant binding and inscribed date by Wilkinson, makes it nearly certain that the issue with "The Little Vagabond" is indeed the 1st issue—as often contended by dealers, but not previously supported by bibliographic or documentary evidence. Lame Duck Books, Oct. cat. 33, #45, 2nd issue lacking "The Little Vagabond," apparently original cloth rebacked ($2500). Adam Mills, Nov. cat. 42, #238, 1st issue with "The Little Vagabond," original cloth rebacked with the original backstrip retained, lightly spotted (£750).

"Follower of William Blake," Triumph over Evil, oil, 142.3 x 49.3 cm. CSK, 11 Sept., #247, illus. color (£1840 on an estimate of £1000-1500). A youthful, Victorian Christ and two warrior angels rise above several Michelangesque devils and a female (Milton's Sin?) with the body of a serpent. A nicely Blakean subject, but clearly not Blake's own work. But one shouldn't quibble; somebody got an impressive slab of paint and canvas, 4½ feet tall, for under £2000.

W. Upcott, sale cat. of his library, Evans, 1846. BBA, 24 April, #411, prices and buyers' names inscribed, letters (including some from Dawson Turner) inserted concerning the sale and its preparation, contemporary half vellum (Quaritch, £1725 on an estimate of £200-300); #412, large-paper issue lacking the portrait, original cloth very worn (Laywood, £276); 11 Sept., #283, large-paper issue, original cloth rebacked (Laywood, £253). The sale included copies of Songs of Experience, America, Europe, and (in 1 lot) "Four Drawings, by Blake."

J. Smetham, Piping Down the Valleys, oil, c. 1860? CL, 6 June, #33, 11.5 x 30.6 cm., illus. color (£2530). A painting illustrating the "Introduction" to Songs of Innocence. A smaller water color of the same subject (and the same image?) was offered by Anthony Reed, spring 1983 cat., #37 (not priced). Blake, The Marriage of Heaven and Hell, J. C. Hotten facsimile, 1868. Adam Mills, June cat. 41, #23, "the first Blake facsimile," foxed as usual, quarto morocco worn (£400).

Blake/An Illustrated Quarterly 125
"Lucifer and the Pope in Hell." Intaglio etching/engraving, c. 1794. Image 18.3 x 24.6 cm.; trimmed on the left and at the top to a plate-mark of 22 x 27.9 cm.; sheet 22.4 x 28 cm. Laid paper, chain-lines 2.8 cm. apart; no watermark. Inscribed on the right below the image in an early hand (but not Blake’s), “William Blake,” and below and a little to the right, “scarce.” Slight evidence of a pencil inscription below the center of the image that might be a preliminary version of an imprint (although no such imprint appears in the 2nd st.). A previously unrecorded 1st (proof) st. with considerable pencil additions almost certainly by Blake. One of three known impressions—two printed in intaglio (the impression reproduced here and a 2nd st. in the British Museum—see illus. 11) and one printed from the surface of the pl. in colors (Huntington Library and Art Gallery—see illus. 12). The pencil additions in the impression illustrated above (but probably not visible in this reproduction) include the following: extensive hatching, rising from left to right, across the upper-left quarter of the print; darkening of Lucifer’s left hand and the chain linking him to the Pope; extensive additions to the Pope’s gown where it falls over his right leg; fragments of whiting in the ground below the Pope’s right foot; slight evidence of whiting or chalk over the confused mass of figures and serpent-like forms right of the Pope. See illus. 11 for the major changes between sts. The comparison reveals that Blake did not add the crosshatching to the plate, suggested by the pencil work upper left in this impression, but that he did darken the Pope’s gown and the chain linking Lucifer and the Pope. Blake did not eliminate the areas touched by whiting and/or chalk in this impression, although he excluded the forms right of the Pope in the color-printed impression in the Huntington (illus. 12). This impression removed in late 1996 from an extra-illustrated copy of Alexander Gilchrist, Life of William Blake, 2 vols. (1863). This copy of Gilchrist was rebound, probably in the late nineteenth century, in full calf by Root and Son. The print was folded down the middle, pasted to a stub, and bound into the Gilchrist volumes, almost certainly in the late nineteenth century. The volumes were acquired many years ago by an American private collector. Now Essick collection (this print only).
11 "Lucifer and the Pope in Hell." Intaglio etching/engraving, c. 1794. Image and plate-mark as in illus. 10, sheet 18.8 x 25.2 cm., wove paper. This previously-assumed 1st and only st. has now been revealed as a 2nd st., thanks to the discovery of the impression reproduced as illus. 10. The additions to the copperplate in this 2nd st. include further crosshatching on the Pope's gown; extensive work on Lucifer's face, including the addition of pupils to both eyes; darkening of the chain linking the two standing figures; additions of further hatching to the ground beneath all figures; additions of cross-hatching to the worm or snake binding the monarch lower left; many small additions to the faces of the crowned monarchs who rise the highest above the group on the left; darkening of the point of Lucifer's spear; additional hatching on the Pope's crown and right foot; darkening of the cloud right of Lucifer and the Pope; additional hatching to the lower reaches of the flames above the monarchs and their minions on the left. British Museum, Dept. of Prints and Drawings; reproduced by permission of the Keeper.

Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge, 2 March 1885 auction cat. of letters from the collection of the Rev. Canon Hodgson, including Blake's letters of 27 Nov. 1805 to William Hayley (now untraced) and 11 Dec. 1805 to the same (in recent years Keynes collection, now apparently untraced), and 18 letters by John Flaxman to Hayley mentioning Blake or projects with which Blake was involved. Questor Rare Books, April private offer, bound with 4 other Sotheby's cats. (acquired by R. Essick). Flaxman's letters to Hayley are quoted from the originals in BR with only 2 exceptions: 31 July 1801 (with "a postscript to Wm. Blake," according to this auction cat.), and 18 Feb. 1802 ("sends him [Hayley] designs for Cowper's monument"—i.e., for pl. 6 in Hayley's Life of Cowper, engraved by Blake).

W. Muir facsimiles of Blake's illuminated books. Heritage Book Shop, Sept. private offer, Songs of Innocence, 1884, original wrappers, not numbered but clearly an early copy because the front cover is inscribed "With J. Pearson's Co[mm]entiments" (all but first 2 letters of the final word rubbed off), with Songs of Experience, 1885, original wrappers, not numbered but inscribed by Muir "for the [London] Times," with the 1st issue of Pearson's "Proposal" for the Muir facsimiles (only the 2nd copy known to me), with a letter by Muir to the London Times dated "28 Nov. 1885" puffing his work and noting that Quaritch rather than had become the distributor, new quarter morocco folding case ($2750). Swann, 20 Nov., 3 lots as follows, all in full sheep with the original wrappers bound in, Muir's copy numbers not recorded: #31, The Marriage of Heaven and Hell ($862); #32, Milton ($1092); #33, There is No Natural Religion ($862).

Blake, There is No Natural Religion, Pickering facsimile, 1886. Adam Mills, June cat. 41, #24, loose as issued in original wrappers, slip-case (£500). Chapel Hill Rare Books, Dec. cat. 115, #30, full morocco by Riviere & Sons, original blue front wrapper bound in (£500).

Annie French (1873-1965), There's little Tom Dacre, a water color based on "The Chimney Sweeper" in Songs of Innocence. 27 x 42.5 cm., signed, dated 1920 on the back. SL, 30 Oct., #232, illus. color (not sold; estimate £2000-3000). The image is not related to Blake's own illustrations to the poem.

Poems from Blake's Songs of Innocence, illus. Maurice Sendak, London. [1967]. CNY, 21 April, #65, 1 of 275 copies, presentation inscription from Sendak to Mary Jarrell (wife of the novelist Randall Jarrell), original pictorial wrappers ($4370 on an estimate of $2000-3000). Surely a record price for a copy of Blake's poems illus. by someone other than the author.

"A collection of 27 works by or about Blake published by the Trianon Press for the William Blake Trust, formed by George Goyder, a founder member of the Trust, with several annotated by him." CL, 26 Nov., #106, title page to the Trianon Press facsimile of Jerusalem copy E illus. ($4370 to Sims Reed).

A wooden chest on attached legs with hinged domed top and tray insert, claw-and-ball feet, white paint and gilt, decorated with reproductions of 18th-century prints of putti and (on the top) lines 5-16 from Blake's "A Cradle Song" (Songs of Innocence). Chest 50.8 cm. wide, 48.3 cm. high (including legs), 33.7 cm. deep. May Private offer from "Feast," a faux-antique and curio shop in Pasadena, CA ($600). The ultimate acquisition for the collector of modern Blakeana? Not as ugly as one might suspect, but even I could resist.

Enamelled porcelain bonbonnière, a tiger couchant on the lid, with the first quatrains of Blake's "The Tyger" inscribed on the inside of the lid. Halcyon Days, fall cat., #GW015, illus. color (£125).

Blake's Circle and Followers

Works are listed under artists' names in the following order: paintings and drawings sold in groups, single paintings and drawings, letters and manuscripts, separate plates, books by (or with plates by or after) the artist.

BARRY, JAMES

CALVERT, EDWARD

Bacchus and Ariadne. Oil on paper, 28 x 37.5 cm. SL, 10 July, #90, illus. color (not sold; estimate £3000-4000). A late work showing no influence by Blake or Palmer.

Iasius, the Old Arcadian, Teaching the Mysteries of Demeter. Oil on board, 16 x 26.7 cm. CL, 11 Nov., #51, illus. color (£4025). Another late work.

12 "Lucifer and the Pope in Hell." Intaglio etching/engraving, c. 1794, color printed from the surface of the plate to the edges of the sheet of wove paper, 19.9 x 27.4 cm. The serpent forms, human head, and what may be a horse's head visible in the intaglio impressions (illus. 10-11) were either not yet etched on the plate or are covered by the color printing right of the Pope. The obscuring effects of the color printing make the determination of the underlying intaglio st. very difficult to determine, but what little evidence I can perceive (e.g., a few touches of hatching among the figures lower left) suggests that this print may very well be in the newly-discovered 1st st. or some other st. earlier than the 2nd st. in the British Museum (illus. 11). Huntington Library and Art Galleries.

FLAXMAN, JOHN

Council of Jupiter, Minerva and Mercury, for Homer's Odyssey, engraved by Pirolli in 1793. Pencil, gray ink, 21.5 x 28.5 cm. SL, 13 Nov., #34 (£598).

The Crucifixion. Pen and gray ink, gray wash, 48.4 x 35.2 cm. Agnew's, Feb. cat. of English water colors and drawings, #15, illus. (price on application).

Oedipus and Antigone. Gray ink and gray wash, 10 x 7 cm., inscribed "Oedipus Coloneus / Act 1: Sc: 1," SL, 13 Nov., #36, illus. (£1035).

Study of St. John the Evangelist Holding a Chalice. Brown wash over pencil, 73.5 x 38.5 cm. SL, 13 Nov., #33, illus. (not sold; estimate £4000-6000).

A Young Man with a Child on His Shoulders. Black and gray ink, gray wash, 16.5 x 9.5 cm. SL, 13 Nov., #35, illus. (not sold; estimate £1000-1500). The design—a front view of a young man carrying a child on his shoulders—inevitably reminds the dedicated Blakean of the frontispiece to Songs of Experience.

128 Blake/An Illustrated Quarterly
13 William Staden Blake after Richard Corbould. Engraved letterhead or insurance form decoration for the Albion Insurance Company, c. 1800-10? Image 11 x 18.9 cm., signed “Corbould del” lower left and “Blake sc ‘Change Alley” lower right. The engravings of W. S. Blake (active c. 1770-1817) have sometimes been confused with those of William Blake, but the “Change [i.e., Exchange] Alley” address makes the attribution to the former certain. Not recorded in the list of W. S. Blake’s works in G. E. Bentley, Jr., “A Collection of Prosaic William Blakes,” Notes and Queries, n.s. 12 (May 1965): 172-78. The wonderfully Blakean name of the insurance company is one of those historical coincidences so appealing to literary critics, conspiracy theorists, and schizophrenics. Essick collection.

A pair of George IV silver wine coolers, produced c. 1820 by Philip Rundell, with chasing designed by Flaxman c. 1811. Each 8028 grams, 27 cm. high. CL, 5 March auction of “Fine Silver and Objects of Vertu,” #109, both containers illus. in color showing the 2 designs (£78,500 on an estimate of £40,000-60,000). See illus. 14.

Dante designs, 1807. Robert Clark, Nov. cat. 49, #284, some foxing, title pages creased, original cloth with printed paper labels, dampstained (£125).

Eight Illustrations of the Lord’s Prayer, lithographs, 1835. BBA, 19 June, #33, original printed wrappers worn and soiled (Marlborough Rare Books, £80).

Flaxman, Anatomical Studies, 1833. Marlborough Rare Books, May cat. 171, #50, frontispiece portrait of Flaxman foxed, original cloth rebacked, label retained (£480).

Odyssey designs, 1793. Waterfield’s, Sept. cat. 169, #68, some marginal staining, early 20th-century calf worn (£140). See also Flaxman under Letterpress Books with Engravings by and after Blake, above.

FUSELI, HENRY

Callipyga: Mrs. Fuseli, with Her Skirts Lifting Standing Before a Dressing Table with Phallic Supports. Pen and brown ink, 16 x 9.5 cm. SL, 13 Nov., #59, illus. color (£17,250). See illus. 15.

St. John’s Vision of the Seven Candlesticks. Oil, 132 x 101 cm., datable to 1796 (when painted for Macklin’s Bible). SL, 12 Nov., #120, illus. color—showing some pigment decay, scratches in the surface of the paint, and a vertical rip in the canvas (£237,900 on an estimate of £60,000-80,000). Fuseli painted this work for Thomas Macklin’s Bible Gallery. It was engraved by James Thomson and published, with an imprint date of 14 Jan. 1797, in Macklin’s 1800 ed. of the Bible. Blake illustrated the same passage from Revelation for The Royal Universal Family Bible (pl. imprint dated 23 Feb. 1782).

“Ariadne and Theseus,” mezzotint by J. R. Smith after Fuseli, 1788. SL, 13 Nov., #635, illus., with a 2nd impression, colored (£1725 on an estimate of £800-1000).

“Boreas and Orytheia,” etching. CSK, 22 May, #328, sold as a work by “Henry Fuseli,” “signed by the artist in pencil bottom left,” foxed. (£161). Neither David Weinglass nor I believes that this print is by or after Fuseli; the supposed signature is not Fuseli’s. Although Weinglass informed Christie’s of his opinion in January 1997, the auction house sold the print as a work by Fuseli without any indication (such as “attributed to”) of doubt.

“Queen Catherine’s Dream,” stipple engraving by Francesco Bartolozzi after Fuseli, 1788. SL, 13 Nov., #639, color printed; with “Prince Arthur’s Vision,” Peltro W. Tomkins after Fuseli, 1788, color printed, slight foxing and creasing in margins; both illus. color (not sold; estimate £3000-4000).

“Tempest,” engraving by Jean-Pierre Simon after Fuseli for Boydell’s Shakespeare, 1797. SL, Nov. 13, #634, color printed with hand coloring, minor damage in margins, illus. (£862).

“Theseus Receiving the Thread from Ariadne,” mezzotint by J. R. Smith after Fuseli, 1788. SL, 13 Nov., #635, some 14 A pair of George IV silver wine coolers, produced by Philip Rundell, London, 1820, with chasing designed by John Flaxman, c. 1811. Each 8028 grams, 27 cm. high. Flaxman’s designs are based on a description of a cup in the First Idyll of Theocritus; hence, these and earlier containers with the same basic design are called “Theocritus Cups.” The design shown here—a woman and her two suitors—was clearly influenced by the “Orpheus” relief in the Villa Albani, Rome (which Flaxman saw during his long visit to Italy, 1787-94). The other side of each cup shows a fisherman and a boy. For preliminary drawings of the woman and suitors, see Robert R. Wark, Drawings by John Flaxman in the Huntington Collection (San Marino: Huntington Library, 1970) 77-79 no. 59 and illus. (pen and brown wash over pencil); David Bindman, ed., John Flaxman (London: Thames and Hudson, 1979) 150 no. 193 and illus. (pen and ink with wash, Victoria and Albert Museum). For the first production of a Theocritus Cup, by the great silversmith Paul Storr c. 1811-13, see N. M. Penzer, Paul Storr (London: Batsford, 1954) 158 and pl. XL. Photo courtesy of Christie’s London.

Decorative yet utilitarian objects of this sort indicate Flaxman’s involvement in the commercial arts. Or, perhaps more importantly, such works question the distinction between the “commercial” and “fine” arts (the latter category institutionalized by the Royal Academy). Situating Blake within a similar social and economic context can provide a salutary antidote to the excessive romanticizing of Blake’s life and works initiated by Alexander Gilchrist’s 1863 biography. The parade of Blake’s commercial failures—his print-publishing business in partnership with James Parker in the 1780s, the Night Thoughts project of the 1790s, the Grave illustrations early in the next century (perhaps a success for the publisher R. H. Cromek, but not for Blake), the 1809 exhibition of paintings, the attempt to produce relief etchings for Thornton’s school Virgil in 1821 (to reference only the best-documented examples)—may not be irrelevant to our understanding of Blake’s efforts as an original artist and poet.

stains and wear, with another impression, “coloured,” uncolored impression illus. (£1725).

Bonnycastle, Introduction to Astronomy, 1787. BBA, 9 Jan., #338, browned and foxed, contemporary calf worn, upper cover detached (Rogers Turner, £115); 23 Oct., #56, modern calf rebacked with cloth (Bob McNaught, £109).

Boydell, Collection of Prints...Illustrating...Shakspeare, 1803. BBA, 22 May, #109, 30 pls from vol. 1 only but including at least 1 after Fuseli, disbound (Cherrington, £575). Phillip Pirages, Oct. cat. 40, #168, 96 pls., 2 vols., 19th-century half morocco, 2 pls. (1 after Fuseli) illus. (£5000).

Cowper, Poems, 1806. Grovesnor Print Shop, March private offer, “A Dressing Room” only, Rhodes after Fuseli (£20).

Gray, Poems, 1800. BBA, 23 Oct., #167, some foxing, half calf, with 5 other vols. of Gray’s poems (Derek Wise, £109).

Knowles, Life and Writings of Fuseli, 1831. Robert Clark, Nov. cat. 49, #287, original cloth faded (£250).
15 Henry Fuseli, Callipyga: Mrs. Fuseli, With her Skirts Lifting Standing Before a Dressing Table with Phallic Supports. Pen and brown ink on laid paper, 16 x 9.5 cm. Datable to the 1790s. The title derives from “Callipyges, a surname of Venus” (according to both Bell’s New Pantheon, 1790, and Lemprière, A Classical Dictionary, 1815). Hence, the English “callipygian,” having shapely buttocks. The Greek inscription, upper left, makes no sense, but the Christie’s auction cat proposes a doubly-marketable innuendo of sado-masochism: “I suffer pain” and “I inflict pain.” The phallic supports for the dressing (or is it always an “undressing”?) table hardly require verbal reiteration; the phallic nature of Mrs. Fuseli’s fetishized coiffure is slightly less obvious (doubters should invert the illustration). Notice the repetition of the same spreading and vulnerable form in the drapery above the woman, in the position of her arms, and in the skirt framing her lower body. Among the more intriguing motifs in this sketch is the circular form, almost like a compass-rose, centered on the woman’s feet and directing toward her even the attention of a modestly-lowered male gaze. Rather than the usual numbers around the circumference of a compass, Fuseli substitutes alternating penile and vaginal/anal forms. The radiant lines of this instrument for sexual navigation direct us both to Fuseli’s personal fascination with his wife’s formidable attractions and to something more mythic—the depersonalized, faceless body as the geographic center of masculine desire, both (latent)ly homosexual and (more acceptably to the artist and his age) heterosexual. Are the arms and hands (forming another sort of “compass”?) of this powerful female poised in command over male arousal, or are they submissively restrained in such a way as to make her available to both exposure and coital/colonial exploration? We may be observing here Fuseli’s equivalent of Blake’s Newton color print, with its geometry of masculinist hegemony over nature, and of Oothoon and her “soft American plains” (Visions of the Daughters of Albion, E 46). Further, is this drawing a precursor of Blake’s frontispiece to Jerusalem, with its male traveller opening a passageway into the abyss? Fuseli’s touchingly matrimonial but blatantly physical eroticism and Blake’s eroticized spiritualism may share some of the same psychic landscape. Photo courtesy of Sotheby’s London.

Milton, Paradise Lost, J. Johnson ed., 1808, with the 1802 pls. Roe and Moore Rare Books, April private offer, later calf (£120). Grovesnor Print Shop, March private offer, 2 pls. only after Fuseli on large sheets (£45 and £50 each).

Young, Catalogue of Pictures...in the Possession of Sir John Fleming Leicester, 1821. BBA, 24 April, #450, contemporary half roan (Quaritch, £149).

LINNELL, JOHN

A folio of 4 drawings and water colors, each signed and dated 1811, 1813, 1814, 1848. 3 water colors, 1 pen and black ink, the largest 31.5 x 43.5 cm. SL, 13 Nov., #83, drawing of 1813 illus. (£6900 on an estimate of £2000-3000).
Balaam and the Angel. Oil, 47 x 68.5 cm., signed and dated 1859. SL, 9 July, #100, illus. color (£3220).

Finchley Common. Pencil, black and white chalk on blue-gray paper, 23.5 x 33.7 cm., signed and dated "1805...?" CL, 11 Nov., #56 (£5750 on an estimate of £1000-1500).

Portrait of Captain Edmund Buchan Craigie. Oil, 29.8 x 22.9 cm., signed and dated 1824. CL, 14 Nov., #45, illus. color (£6900 on an estimate of £2500-3500).

Portrait of G. W. Wood. Oil, 48.2 x 38.7 cm., signed and dated 1835. CSK, 13 March, #32, illus. color (£2760).

Portrait of R. J. Thornton, M.D. Pencil, 23 x 18 cm., signed "J. Linnell / J. L. Jany 29.\textsuperscript{h} 1826." SL, 13 Nov., #55 (£805). Thornton commissioned Blake to execute his wood engravings illustrating a school edition of Virgil's Woodcutters in Windsor Forest. Oil, 21 x 26 cm., signed, datable to 1820. SL, 9 July, #89, illus. color (£4140).

Letter to H. Mogford, 27 Dec. 1854. Ian Hodgkins, May cat. 93, #275, concerning the delivery of some paintings (£38).

Letter to W. Holmes, Feb. 1855. Ian Hodgkins, May cat. 93, #276, outlining Linnell's terms for a painting (£45).

MORTIMER, JOHN HAMILTON

"Nebuchadnezzar Recovering His Reason," etching, 44.4 x 35.3 cm., Blyth after Mortimer, 1781. Campbell Fine Art, March private offer, very fine impression printed in brown, crease in lower right corner (£1600—probably a record price for any print after Mortimer). SL, 13 Nov., #716, with a large group of other prints after Mortimer, "Nebuchadnezzar" illus. (£690). The design may have influenced Blake's 1795 color print of "Nebuchadnezzar." Mortimer's pen and ink drawing, 40.7 x 36 cm. and the reverse of the etching, was bequeathed to the British Museum by Richard Payne Knight in 1824.

PALMER, SAMUEL

Backways near Tintagel, Cornwall. Water color, 18.5 x 26.7 cm., signed, dated to 1848. Agnew's, Feb. cat. of English water colors and drawings, #91, illus. (price on application).

The Bay of Naples. Water color with touches of gold, 19.7 x 42 cm. Agnew's, Feb. cat. of English water colors and drawings, #92, illus. (price on application).

16 The Evening Star, attributed to Samuel Palmer. Mixed media on panel, 22.5 x 27.5 cm., c. 1835? If indeed by Palmer, this work probably dates from his "Devon" period immediately following the more famous "Shoreham" period. The three auctions in which this problematic work has appeared trace a history of uncertain attribution. Sotheby's London first offered the painting on 19 April 1961, #89, "The Property of Ellis Tracey." The catalogue dates the work to "circa 1825" and states that it was accompanied by a letter from A. H. Palmer, Samuel Palmer's son, dated 25 March 1889. R. J. Hewitt purchased the painting for £5,200. He was very probably the vendor at the Sotheby's auction on 15 July 1964, #58 (£4800 to Agnew's, the London dealer). In both these auctions, the artist's name was given in full without the "attributed to" designation—a traditional auctioneer's code for a doubtful attribution—printed in Sotheby's more circumspect catalogue of 9 April 1997, #81. The 1964 catalogue makes no reference to the A. H. Palmer letter; the 1997 catalogue mentions its presence in the 1961 sale but gives no further details. In the absence of the letter from Palmer's son, or any record of what the document might have said about this painting, suspicions about its authenticity have grown, perhaps because of the lurid coloring in the sky and the awkward treatment of the mountain. The surface of the paint, particularly in the foreground, is cracked. My own opinion, based on an examination of the painting while at Sotheby's in March 1997 and a comparison with the work reproduced here as illus. 17, is that this is almost certainly a genuine work by Samuel Palmer, although hardly representative of his finest efforts as an artist which, at their best, epitomize the intense, the severe, and the rustic-antique. Even a man granted by a small band of his cultural progeny the retrospective curse of being a mad/inspired/romantic genius can have an off day. See also illus. 17 and the caption thereto. 17 Samuel Palmer, Landscape—Twilight. Oil and tempera on panel, 26.5 x 38 cm., datable to 1835. The foreground details indicate Palmer’s continued “visionary” qualities, transported from his Shoreham period into his response to the landscape of Devon in the mid-1830s. The background mountain and intensely-colored sky are very similar to the work reproduced here as illus. 16. These shared characteristics help us attribute illus. 16 to Palmer with more confidence than we would otherwise have. It is an accidental but most welcome boon to old-fashioned scholars, still fixated on aesthetic quality and attribution, when two complementary works appear for inspection in the auction market in the same year. The End of the Day: A Recollection of Italy. Water color, 14.6 x 21.3 cm., signed, datable to c. 1871. Spink-Leger, May cat. of water colors and drawings, #60, illus. color (£80,000).

The Evening Star, attributed to Palmer. Mixed media on panel, 22.5 x 27.5 cm. SL, 9 April, #81, illus. color (£21,850 on an estimate £10,000-15,000). See illus. 16 and compare to illus. 17.

Eventide. Water color, 19.7 x 42.2 cm., datable to c. 1858, signed. CL, 7 Nov., #32, illus. color (£37,800).

Harvesting. Water color, 38.2 x 51.4 cm., signed, dated to c. 1851. Agnew’s, Feb. cat. of English water colors and drawings, #88, illus. color (price on application).

Landscape—Twilight. Oil and tempera on panel, 26.5 x 38 cm., datable to 1835. SL, 12 Nov., #102, illus. color (not sold; estimate of £300,000-400,000). See illus. 17.

Morning: The Early Ploughman. Water color, 24.5 x 17.5 cm., signed, squared for transfer, repair near center of image, datable to c. 1863. Artemus Group, New York, April private offer (price on inquiry). Previously sold SL, 14 July 1994, #157 (£31,050).

The Ruins of the Amphitheatre at Pompeii, 1838. Water color, 33 x 49.5 cm. Agnew’s, Feb. cat. of English water colors and drawings, #90, illus. (price on application).

“Weary Ploughman,” etching. SL, 20 March, #77, 7th st. on laid India (not sold; estimate £1000-1500).

RICHMOND, GEORGE

Contemplation. Oil, 30 x 35.5 cm. SL, 9 April, #113, illus. color (£6325).

A Damned Soul Hanging from a Gothic Building. Pen, ink, and water color on the verso of a letter signed and dated 1823, 7 x 6.3 cm. Garton & Co., Feb. cat. 67, #4, illus. ($8000).

Corrigendum

In “Blake in the Marketplace, 1994,” Blake 28 (1995):12-21 (captions to illus. 1-2), I claimed that the recto/verso impressions of Europe pls. 11 and 17 in my collection were from copy c of that illuminated book. This is not true, as G. E. Bentley, Jr., has pointed out in Blake Books Supplement (Oxford: Clarendon P, 1995) 69n56, 104n119. Unfortunately, the provenance of this leaf cannot be traced prior to 1964. I am grateful to my friend and fellow seeker of minute particulars, Jerry Bentley, for this correction.

Appendix 1: New Information on Blake's Engravings

The Separate Plates of William Blake: A Catalogue

Pp. 41-43, "Lucifer and the Pope in Hell." For the discovery of a previously-unknown first state, see illus. 10-12 and their captions. This discovery means that impression 1A (intaglio, British Museum) should be changed to 2A (indicating its status as a second state). I previously speculated that color-printed impression 1B (Huntington Library) was trimmed on a plate-mark of 19.9 x 27.4 cm.; the discovery of the new impression (which should be designated 1A) reveals that the plate-mark is very probably 22 x 27.9 cm. The underlying intaglio state of color-printed impression 1B is difficult to determine, but it may be in the newly-discovered first state or in some other state earlier than the second (British Museum).

P. 145, "Venus Dissuades Adonis from Hunting," after Cosway, 1787. During the writing of the catalogue, I was unable to locate an impression of the first state that included the imprint. An impression with the imprint was sold at Sotheby's London, 13 Nov. 1997, lot 704, illus. This impression, now in the stock of the print dealer Nicholas Lott, confirms the first-state signatures, title, inscribed verses, and imprint (the last quoted from Keynes, Engravings by Blake: The Separate Plates 69) recorded in the catalogue.

William Blake's Commercial Book Illustrations

Pp. 38-39, The Wit's Magazine, pl. 5, "May-Day in London." The preliminary drawing by Samuel Collings is reported as being in the Art Gallery of New South Wales, Sydney, "although the curator has not yet been able to track it down" (Separate Plates 39). The drawing has apparently been found; at the very least, it is reproduced in Marcia Pointon, "Quakerism and Visual Culture 1650-1800," Art History 20 (1997): 425, pl. 48 (pen and gray wash, no size given). I am grateful to John E. Grant for pointing out this reproduction to me.

Pp. 61-64, Gay, Fables (1793). In my descriptions of each of Blake's 12 plates, I compare his renditions of the designs by William Kent, John Wootton, and Henry Gravelot to those engraved by various hands and printed in the first eds. of the first (1727) and second (1738) series of fables. The first-series pls. of 1727 have a horizontal major axis; those for the second series of 1738 have a vertical major axis. Following Geoffrey Keynes, "Blake's Engravings for Gay's Fables," The Book Collector 21 (1972): 59-64, I indicate that these sets of plates served as the models for Blake's. But this may be an invalid assumption. For the fifth ed. of the first series of Fables (London: J. and R. Tonson and J. Watts, 1737), all the original designs were re-engraved by Gerard Van Der Gucht (c. 1695-1776, not to be confused with his brother John, 1697-1776, who engraved pls. for the first eds.). In the 1757 ed. of both series (London: C. Hitch and L. Hawes, et al.), the G. Van Der Gucht pls. for the first series are repeated, with new plates signed by the same engraver now appearing in the second series as well. These re-engravings for both series may have served as Blake's models. This possibility is increased by the fact that G. Van Der Gucht's pls. illustrating Fables I, XII, and XVI in the second series reverse right and left, in comparison to the pls. for these fables in the 1738 ed., and alter the format of the original 1738 pls. to a horizontal major axis. These same changes in both direction and axis appear in the 3 corresponding pls. that Blake engraved for the second series (pls. 10-12 in Bentley). The 1762 and 1767 eds. of both series contain unsigned re-engravings of the original designs. Because of their vertical format, it is improbable that Blake used this later set of pls. as his model.

Pp. 89-90, Hayley, Life of Cowper, pl. 6, "A Sketch of the Monument Erected ... In Memory of William Cowper Esq," Blake after Flaxman. In addition to the record of Flaxman's later delivery of preliminary drawings for this pl. to Hayley, the sculptor apparently sent his first recorded drawing of the monument with a letter of 18 Feb. 1802—see Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge, 2 March 1885 auction cat., letters from the collection of the Rev. Canon Hodgson, lot 63 (Flaxman "sends him [Hayley] designs for Cowper's monument" according to the auction cat., original letter untraced). This is probably the same drawing which Hayley in turn sent to Lady Hesketh on 21 Feb. 1802 (now Houghton Library, Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts).

Appendix 2: Current Ownership of the Preliminary Drawings for, and Proofs and Relief Etchings of, Blake's Wood Engravings Illustrating Thornton's Virgil.

Over the last 15 years, several of the Virgil drawings, one impression of the pre-publication proofs of the wood engravings, and the unique relief-etching of four images have changed hands. The following lists record the present (Jan. 1998) ownership of each of these works.

Drawings. Numbers and titles are those assigned to each drawing in Butlin #769.
2. Thenot and Colinet Converse Seated beneath Two Trees. Robert N. Essick, Altadena, California.
5. Thenot, with Colinet Swaying his Arms in Sorrow. Untraced since 1924.
7. "Nor Fox, Nor Wolf, Nor Rat among Our Sheep." Beinecke Library, Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut.
12. Colinet with his Shepherd's Pipe. Untraced since 1924.
17. Thenot and Colinet Leading Their Flocks Home Together at Sunset. Untraced since 1927.
18. Thenot and Colinet at Supper. Untraced since 1924.

Relief etching of cuts 2-5 (corresponding to Butlin's drawings 1-3, 5): Robert N. Essick, Altadena, California.

Proofs of the wood engravings before the block was cut down, cuts 2-5 (corresponding to Butlin's drawings 1-3, 5): British Museum, Dept. of Prints and Drawings, London; Houghton Library, Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts; Rosenwald Collection, National Gallery of Art, Washington; Maurice Sendak, Connecticut.

Proofs of the wood engravings before the block was cut down, cuts 6-9 (corresponding to Butlin's drawings 6-9): British Museum, Dept. of Prints and Drawings, London; Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge, England; Pierpont Morgan Library, New York; Rosenwald Collection, National Gallery of Art, Washington.

William Blake and His Circle: A Checklist of Publications and Discoveries in 1997

BY G. E. BENTLEY, JR.

With the Assistance of Keiko Aoyama for Japanese Publications

The annual checklist of scholarship and discoveries concerning William Blake and his circle records publications for the current year (say, 1997) and those for previous years which are not recorded in Blake Books (1977), Blake Books Supplement (1995), and "William Blake and His Circle" (1994-97). The organization of the checklist is as follows:

Division I: William Blake

Part I: Editions, Translations, and Facsimiles of Blake's Writings
   Section A: Original Editions and Reprints
   Section B: Collections and Selections
Part II: Reproductions of his Art
Part III: Commercial Book Engravings
Part IV: Catalogues and Bibliographies
Part V: Books Blake Owned
Part VI: Criticism, Biography, and Scholarly Studies

Note: Collections of essays on Blake and issues of periodicals devoted entirely to him are listed in one place, with cross-references to their authors.

Division II: Blake's Circle

This division is organized by individual (say, William Hayley or John Flaxman), with works by and about Blake's friends and patrons, living individuals with whom he had significant direct and demonstrable contact. It includes Thomas Butts, Thomas Hartley Cromek, George Cumberland, John Flaxman and his family, Henry Fuseli, Thomas and William Hayley, John Linnell and his family, Samuel Palmer, James Parker, George Richmond, Thomas Stothard, and John Varley. It does not include important contemporaries with whom Blake's contact was negligible or non-existent such as John Constable and William Wordsworth and Edmund Burke; such major figures are dealt with more comprehensively elsewhere, and the light they throw upon Blake is very dim.
