A New Blake Videotape

Blake/An Illustrated Quarterly, Volume 5, Issue 3, Winter, 1971-72, pp. 163-164
BLAKE IN THE GALLERIES

The Tate Gallery, London, announces that "following the very successful exhibition of William Blake's illustrations to the poems of Thomas Gray, organized by the William Blake Trust in association with the Tate Gallery, the Tate's own collection of works by Blake has been rehung in Gallery 29. Some additional works normally in store have been added to the display but more exciting are two important loans, "Winter" and "Evening," lent by the Trustees of the Rev. B. T. Vaughan Johnson. These were painted by Blake to flank a fireplace at his friend The Rev. John Johnson's Rectory at Yaxham, Norfolk, which was rebuilt in about 1820-21; they have remained in the possession of the family ever since. Unfortunately, a third painting, a frieze showing Olney Bridge, which ran across the top of the fireplace, seems to have been destroyed early this century."

The Pierpont Morgan Library, New York, exhibited the Blake Collection of Mrs. Landon K. Thorne from 19 November to 22 January. The collection of books, manuscripts, drawings, and engravings had never been seen before as a unit in public exhibition. At the same time the Library showed Blake's watercolors for Milton and the Library's recently purchased copy of Poetical Sketches. A catalogue of the exhibition, The Blake Collection of Mrs. Landon K. Thorne (60 pp. of text, 30 pis.) by B. E. Bentley, Jr., has been published.

The Albright-Knox Art Gallery, Buffalo, New York, in late 1971 exhibited its copy of Blake's Job engravings and of the seven Dante engravings, both proof copies. They were purchased by the Gallery in 1943, but have never been shown as a unit, and have been shown only once outside the Gallery, at Buffalo's 20th Century Club in 1951. (Our thanks to Professor Thomas Connolly for calling our attention to the Albright-Knox exhibit. Eds.)

Paris, early 1972, will see Blake well represented in a major exhibition of British Romantic painting. The catalogue entries for the Blake pictures have been written by David Bindman (Lecturer in the History of Art, Westfield College, London). There are likely to be twelve items shown: The Adoration of the Kings (Brighton Art Gallery); The Head of Voltaire (Manchester Art Gallery); The Ancient of Days, colored print (Whitworth Art Gallery, Manchester); The House of Death, monotype (Fitzwilliam Museum, Cambridge); Death on a Pale Horse (Fitzwilliam); Pity, monotype (Tate Gallery); Newton, monotype (Tate); Beatrice on the Car, watercolor (British Museum); The Circle of the Lustful, watercolor (Birmingham City Art Gallery); Thornton's Virgin, wood engravings (Victoria and Albert Museum); Songs of Innocence and of Experience (Kings College, Cambridge); Small Book of Designs, four plates (British Museum).

RECENT BLAKE SALES—See Robert Essick's essay "Blake at Auction 1971" below, Notes.

BLAKE FACSIMILES

A limited number of single-plate "overs" (prices £2.25, $1.50, 45p) from the hand-colored facsimiles and the offset Handbook produced by the Trianon Press, Paris, for the William Blake Trust which were on sale at the Blake Exhibition in the National Library of Scotland in 1969 are available for purchase, along with greeting cards (price 5p) of seven subjects from Songs of Innocence and of Experience. Inquiries to the Publications Officer, National Library of Scotland, George IV Bridge, Edinburgh EH1 1EW, Scotland.

BLAKE SEMINAR, MLA CHICAGO 1971

The 1971 Blake Seminar, a gathering of about twenty dedicated travelers, met on 28 December at the Newberry Library in Chicago. Morris Eaves (University of New Mexico) led a discussion of The Marriage of Heaven and Hell. As the announcement of the Seminar had warned, the discussion roam ed freely from text to illustration to text with little guidance other than literary free-association, though it showed a tendency to focus repeatedly on plates 4 and 10 and the plates most closely related to them in The Marriage.

BLAKE SEMINAR, MLA NEW YORK 1972

Joseph A. Wittreich, Jr. (University of Wisconsin) has announced that Blake and Tradition is the topic for the 1972 Blake Seminar, which will meet during the Annual MLA Meeting in New York. The papers that will provide the basis of the discussion will appear in the Fall 1972 issue of Blake Studies.

A NEW BLAKE VIDEOTAPE

A videotape interpretation of Blake's Visions of the Daughters of Albion, produced at York University and intended for use in the Classroom, was shown on 29 December to about thirty people at the MLA Annual Meeting in Chicago. After the showing there was a discussion led by the director, Bob Wallace (York University), and by the writers of the script, Janet Warner (York University) and John Sutherland (Colby College). The fifty-minute videotape was made in October 1971. It includes a dramatic reading of the poem and interpretive commentary, and it uses graphics from Blake, Stedman's Surinam, and a variety of other sources.

Shown here are three samples of graphics used in the videotape, plates from Capt. J. G. Stedman's Narrative of a five years' expedition, against the Revolted Negroes of Surinam . . . (London: J. Johnson & J. Edwards, 1796). Stedman drew all the illustrations for his book, and Blake engraved about sixteen of them, including the three shown here.
American distribution for the videotape is now being arranged.

BLAKE AND GINSBERG ON ABC-TV'S "DIRECTIONS"

Two films, both produced and directed by Aram Boyajian, were shown 16 and 23 January on ABC-TV's "Directions." Allen Ginsberg sings and reads from Blake's works in illuminated printing as plates from those works are shown. A facsimile was used in the preparation of the films for shots of Jerusalem only; otherwise the photography is of originals.

The subject of the first film, William Blake: Innocence and Experience, is The Rose in No Natural Religion and the Songs. Ginsberg talks about the influence Blake has had on his own poetry, sings "Ah! Sun-Flower," and reads several other songs. Besides plates from the Songs, there are shots of Westminster Abbey and of the high-rise building now on the site of Blake's birthplace. William Blake: Prophet, the second film, includes shots of the cottage at Felpham. Ginsberg talks on camera about the feeling of "going mad" when he heard a voice speaking Blake's poems, and he sings "The Sick Rose." He reads as selected pictures from The Book of Urizen, Milton, Jerusalem, the watercolor Job series, and the Dante series are shown.

ROSE LECTURES ON BLAKE

E. J. Rose, Chairman of the Department of English at the University of Alberta, delivered the Edmund Kemper Broadus Lectures at the University 24-27 January. All the lectures were on Blake: "Blake's Los," 24 January; "Blake's Orc," 25 January; "Blake's Woman Figure," 26 January; and "The Shape of Blake's Vision," 27 January.

THE SONGS ONSTAGE IN NEW YORK

In January the Dance and Drama Theatre of New York City presented Three Pieces in Multi Media. The third of the three was "Blake's Songs of Innocence and of Experience" directed by Michael Fischetti.

W. H. STEVENSON AT STUDIES IN ROMANTICISM

The well-known Blake scholar W. H. Stevenson is now editor of Studies in Romanticism (published quarterly by Boston University Graduate School at 236 Bay State Road, Boston, Mass. 02215). Although founded in the Department of English, the journal publishes articles on all aspects of Romanticism--its literature (in any language), art, music, history, philosophy, and science--and thus it is of interest to anyone with a specialized or general interest in the period. There have been articles on Blake at different times by such scholars as G. E. Bentley, Jr., Robert F. Gleckner, John E. Grant, Martin K. Nummi, Morton D. Paley, and Edward J. Rose (who also has an article in the Winter 1972 issue). The fourth number of each volume is usually devoted to one author or topic within the field of Romantic studies. Subscriptions are $6.50 for one year; $12 for two years; $16 for three years. A cumulative index is available for the first ten volumes, 1961-1971, price $1.

MARY WOLSTENCRAFT NEWSLETTER

The Mary Wollstonecraft Newsletter will be published twice a year beginning in May 1972. Its subject will be women writers of the late-eighteenth and early-nineteenth centuries, and women in the literature of the period. Short articles of fewer than 3000 words, notes, and reviews are welcomed from